SWEPT TO DEATH OVER HIGH DAM

Seven Young People Drowned While Boating on the Schuylkill.

FRIENDLY WARNINGS MET WITH DERISION

Victims Did Not Realize Their Peril Until It Was Too Late.

ONE CLUNG TO BOAT AND WAS RESCUED.

Young Women Buried in Swirl of Water and Did Not Reappear. Futile Struggle for Life by Two Young Men—Survivor May Die.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—A rowboat containing a picnic party of five young women and three young men was swept by the swift current in the Schuylkill river over the Flat Rock dam late this afternoon and all but one were drowned.

THE DEAD.

Florence Bond, aged 17 years, 605 North Twelfth street.

Mary Sullivan, 20 years, 1216 Mt. Vernont street.

Maude Rutter, 19 years, 1202 Mt. Vernon street.

Mary Kenney, 15 years, 1429 Clarion street.

Florence Densmore, 15 years, Twenty-fourth and Taylor streets.

Bertram Osmond, 19 years, 731 Dudley street.

Leo Riker, 21 years, 1317 Latona street.

RESCUED.

John Moore, aged 21 years, 951 Cantrell street.

Young Moore reached the overturned boat and throwing his body across the keel was carried down the stream nearly a mile, when he was rescued by two men who rowed out from the shore in a skiff. Moore was unconscious when taken to a hospital and his condition late this evening was extremely critical.

Flat Rock dam, the scene of the disaster, is situated on the Schuylkill, two miles above Manayunk and nine miles north of the center of the city.

About 100 members of the Elm Social club left their headquarters, 1129 Passayunk avenue early this morning and were driven in coaches to the excursion grounds at Rose Glen, on the west side of the Schuylkill, a short distance above the dam. During the afternoon several boating parties were organized. As Moore, Rinker and Osmond with their companions entered the boat they were cautioned not to go near the dam. On their way down stream people on the banks called out to the occupants of the boat to turn back, only to receive the reply, "Mind your own business."

Soon after the skiff was caught in the strong current and rapidly swept toward the dam. Not until the breast was reached did the members of the party leave their seats in the boat. Then the girls jumped up almost in mid-air and with their arms reached piteously out toward the wall of water down which they were carried in an instant.

Boat and occupants were buried in the swirl of water below the falls. Not one of the five girls, it is said, again came to the surface. Twenty or 30 yards below the dam at first two men were seen struggling for their lives. Then both disappeared.

Moore meanwhile was being carried down the stream on top of the capsized boat to be finally rescued nearly a mile below the dam.

Up to midnight none of the bodies had been recovered.

Nearly all the victims were employed in factories. During the day many of the members of the picnicking party freely indulged in liquor in the grove. It is not known, however, that any of the parties in the ill-fated boat were intoxicated.

THREE UNKNOWN BOYS DROWNED

Yachtsmen Make a Mad Race to Save Their Lives, But Are Too Late.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

CLEVELAND, O., May 30.—Three boys whose identities have not yet been learned were drowned in Lake Erie today. They were fishing from a rowboat when it capsized, throwing the trio into the water. Before assistance could reach them they had disappeared for the last time beneath the waves. The lake was smooth and a gentle breeze was blowing. It is said that the boys were careless. A corked whisky bottle was found floating on the surface near the upturned boat.

The three boys, whose ages ranged between 16 and 20 years, rented a boat and fishing tackle early to-day. Among those who noticed them as they rowed down the river were W. J. Brodie and L. L. Malm, the Swedish vice consul, who were on the lake in their yacht and saw the boys singing and having a good time. Suddenly their attention was attracted by loud cries of "Help! help!" Capt. Brodie wheeled the yacht about and then began a mad race for life and death. With all the speed in the yacht she shot ahead toward the overturned boat, but before they quite reached the scene all the boys had disappeared from sight.

JUSTICE BREWER TO WED.

His Bride-Elect Is a Washington School Principal.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—Announcement has been made of the engagement of Associate Justice David J. Brewer of the United States supreme court and Miss Emma Miner Mott. The wedding, which will take place next week at Burlington, Vt., where the nearest relatives of Miss Mott live, will be very quiet, because of the recent death of the bride's mother.

Miss Mott is principal of the Morse school building. She met Justice Brewer at the First Congregational church, where both attended services. Justice Brewer is a widower.

Riot Near Cumberland.

CUMBERLAND, May 30.—A desperate fight took place to-day between 200 American laborers and 50 Italians. Many were wounded and one will die.

M'KINLEY TAKES UP THE CUBAN QUESTION

ARRIVES IN WASHINGTON AND GOES TO WORK AT ONCE

Mrs. McKinley Fatigued and Worn by the Journey Homeward, but Rests Well—The President Assists to Carry Her in a Chair from the Carriage to the White House—Did Not Attend Memorial Exercises.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—The presidential train arrived in this city at 7:30 o'clock and the president lost but little time in resumption of public business. Owing to Mrs. McKinley's fatigued condition and the visit of Dr. Rixey, the chief magistrate failed to attend Memorial Day exercises at Arlington cemetery, as he intended, but in the afternoon he took part in a conference over the Cuban situation, which was attended also by Secretary Root, Senator O. H. Platt, chairman of the senate committee on relations with Cuba, and Senator Spooner of Wisconsin.

For more than an hour and a half the situation in Cuba was considered, and when the conference broke up no determination had been reached. It is expected that the whole matter will be brought before the cabinet to-morrow, and, possibly, will be further discussed with those who have had much to do with shaping Cuban relations thus far. The president and his advisers must determine whether the Platt amendment has been "substantially" adopted by the convention. This is preliminary to the withdrawal of the United States authority and forces from the island of Cuba.

Dr. Rixey called at the White House at 3 o'clock this afternoon. He said Mrs. McKinley is resting comfortably. Secretary Cortelyou sent a dispatch to-day to Dr. Hirschfelder in San Francisco saying: "Dr. Rixey reports that Mrs. McKinley stood the trip as well as could be expected and is resting well."

No demonstration marked any portion of the early morning run of the presidential train toward Washington, although a few people were gathered at points along the way. In this city several hundred people lined the sidewalks. A police cordon of a score or more men was early on the scene and stationed at intervals along both sides of the track reserved for the train. A few government officials were present. The train was run upon a track in the middle of Sixth street, just outside of the Pennsylvania station, and the presidential carriage was drawn up alongside.

Mrs. McKinley was removed from the private car Olympia to the carriage on a chair borne by the president and Dr. Rixey, assisted by several others. She was pale and showed her weakened condition. Several members of the cabinet stood alongside ready to lend a helping hand. Mrs. McKinley was slowly lifted into the carriage and made comfortable. Then, to avoid the rough cobblestones of the street, the crowd was cleared from the smooth stone sidewalk next to the depot, along which the carriage was slowly driven on the way to the White House.

The president's carriage, on arrival at the White House, stopped at the edge of the plaza instead of being driven into the regular driveway. This was to avoid the steps at the driveway interfering with the lifting of the chair. An usher stood at the horses' heads as the president and Dr. Rixey, aided by attendants, carefully lifted Mrs. McKinley into a chair and carried her slowly into the White House and to her apartments.

HAWAIIAN OFFICIALS BEFORE GRAND JURY

Charges of Bribery Made by President Dole Being Investigated.

(Special Correspondence of Associated Press.)

HONOLULU, May 22, VIA SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—The special grand jury called to investigate the charges of bribery in the legislature has had as witnesses Gov. Dole, Attorney General Dole, Secretary of the Territory Cooper and other high officials, and on the refusal of some of them to answer questions it has had them brought into court to show cause why they should not testify.

In the absence of S. B. Dole, who is indisposed, Secretary Cooper is acting governor.

The grand jury began its investigations on a letter from the governor to the legislature refusing to extend the session because he had been informed that bribery was taking place. Gov. Dole appeared before the jury, and it is said told all that he knew. The other heads of departments were summoned and all refused to tell what they knew on the ground that the information they had received was in the nature of a privileged communication, having been given to them as government officials.

Acting Governor Cooper, Attorney-General Dole and A. T. Thurston, president of the Gazette Publishing Company, were summoned to appear before Judge Humphreys and show cause why they should not tell the grand jury what they had heard regarding bribery in the legislature. Judge Humphreys sustained Dole, as it was shown that he had told the grand jury the names of the men from whom he had received evidence. Thurston had told the jury that he heard that legislators had approached a corporation with solicitation of bribes, but he declined to give the name of the corporation on the ground that as attorney he had a right to withhold it, as given in confidence by a client to an attorney. Judge Humphreys adjudged Thurston guilty of contempt, fined him $100 and ordered him into custody until the end of the session of the grand jury, or until he should answer the question of the jury as to who was the client. He applied to the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus, and was released on $500 bail.

The grand jury has indicted Walter G. Smith, editor of the Advertiser, for perjury. It is alleged in the indictment that he denied knowledge of the name of a corporation, said to have been approached by members of the legislature with solicitations for bribes, when in fact he knew the name of the said corporation. Smith was released on $5,000 bail.

Judge Humphreys took the cases of Acting Governor Cooper and Superintendent of Public Works McCandless under advisement. McCandless has left his office.

TO DISCUSS THE SITUATION.

National Metal Trades Association Will Hold a Meeting in New York.

MILWAUKEE, May 30.—Edwin Reynolds, president of the National Trades association, to-day called a meeting of that body to be held in New York on June 11 to discuss the machinists' strike situation. Since the strike was inaugurated many additional firms have joined the national association and at this meeting the interests of the association will be thoroughly discussed and a decision arrived at as to the future course to be pursued by the association.

SHARON, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—The machinists' strike has spread to the American Steel Casting Company's works. The men yesterday made a demand for an advance in wages of 12½ per cent, a nine-hour work day and double time for all work performed on Sundays and legal holidays. The apprentices ask an increase of 3½ cents a day.

MR. CARNEGIE'S NEW MANSION

Wonders of His New York Residence Grow as the Work Progresses.

OWNER'S IDEAS NOT LIKE ARCHITECT'S PLANS

Half of the 80 Rooms Are Underground—Sub-Cellar Like a Huge Iron Foundry—Basement a Hive of Industry—Ornate Carving.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

NEW YORK, May 30.—A huge block of apartment houses is being demolished and cleared away to give additional area to the grounds surrounding the new mansion of Andrew Carnegie. Already one block has been sacrificed, and others are to follow. In order to make landscape gardening possible, the solid rock has been excavated to a depth of ten feet, the huge basin thus made having been drained and filled with loam, and in this bed 70 maple trees have been planted. The landscape gardeners' work will come later.

There are 80 rooms in the Carnegie house, and of these easily half are in the quarters below ground—that is, in the basement, cellar and sub-cellar. Here the plumbers have held possession for months, laying the foundation of personal comfort as it will be later enjoyed by the residents above stairs. With $100,000 worth of heating apparatus and $50,000 worth of plumbing in its relation to water and the sewerage system, there is reason to credit the statement that this Carnegie mansion will have the most perfect system of plumbing in the world.

Below Ground, Like Iron Works.

At present, of course, everything is rough, but the boilers, cylinders, brass pipes, the zinc air boxes, the thermostats, the thousand and one details that no one but an engineer can understand, will represent the fortune invested there.

In the sub-cellar, two flights below ground, is the great furnace and the coal bin that holds 200 tons of coal. Over a miniature railroad track runs a small car between the bin and the furnace, directed automatically, so that from the coal supply one quarter of a ton is emptied into the car at once, after which the car trundles its way to the furnace and deposits its load into the fire. On this same floor are three huge water filters. There are also improvements in the direction of sewerage that preclude the possibility of sewage gas. The walls, floors and ceilings are tiled. A master engineer with three assistants, each having a corps of three hands, will constitute the force employed to run the mechanism below ground.

In the cellar proper is the connecting link between the furnace and the registers and radiators above it. Only the mechanical mind can grasp the why and wherefores of the network of machinery that here abounds in every direction. On this floor, everything in sight is tile. The wine cellar has its iaths with walls honeycombed with small openings, each large enough to hold one bottle. The laundry and ironing room are situated in a corner of the cellar, and the drying room is also there. These rooms are all small.

Where the Mansion's Work Is Done.

Another flight up leads to the basement proper. Here is the kitchen, the house keeper's private apartment and office, linen closet, soot room, brush room, servants' dining room and the steward's office, with its window looking out upon the servants' entrance, so that he may know of the comings and goings of the world below. Again, the walls, ceilings and floors are tiled. On this floor also is the telephone "central" of the Carnegie mansion. There are 20 telephones in the house, in place of speaking tubes. All electric wires in the house are encased in iron pipes, and the unlaid floors at the present time reveal the mechanism employed in this particular. Everything in the building is fireproof, as far as it is constructed up to the present time. The kitchen, it is said, will be the most perfect in every detail of any that has ever been built.

One flight up from the basement brings one on a level with the carriage drive. In this hall are to be wonders unpublished and unwritten. Mr. Carnegie has given orders that the wood carving shall be the most ornate that is procurable. At the right of the front door is the room where the people who call on official business are to be received. At the left is the place where the organ will stand. It is said in regard to this organ that the manufacturers have proved themselves so grasping as to space that the architects recommended that in future when a house is to be supplied with a church organ the organ be built first and the house built around it. The organ is to cost $16,000.

The Private Apartments.

On this floor are the usual rooms. The drawing room the library, Mr. Carnegie's private library and "den," and the grand picture gallery, which is also the billiard room; the breakfast room and the hall itself, which is the music room. Only the experienced and imaginative can picture the appearance of these apartments when supplied with all that art can devise. But this is all a secret at present.

From the arrangement of the rooms on the second floor it is evident that the house has been designed to meet the requirements of the family of the owner, for the entire floor is devoted to the use of three people. The window of Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie's private apartments overlooks Central park, the drive and the reservoir lake. This is like a view into a private park. In the southwest corner is an enormous double room—the bedroom—and from it toward the north opens Mr. Carnegie's dressing room. From the other side of the double bedroom is Mrs. Carnegie's dressing room, and from that opens her private bathroom.

The other rooms on the floor are the day nursery for little Miss Carnegie, a large, sunshiny room overlooking the private grounds; the night nursery, the private bathroom, the nurse's private sitting room, and, last, the private pantry, where the child's food may be prepared in case of emergency.

Two Elevators in the House.

There is a passenger elevator which runs from the parlor floor to the third floor only, and the servants' elevator, which runs from the cellar to the top floor, where are the servants' quarters. The third floor contains the guest rooms, and is arranged to accommodate a large house party when occasion requires. The apartments of Mrs. Carnegie's sister, who is a member of the family, are on the third floor.

Mr. Carnegie has given instructions that the most elaborate woodwork in the house be placed in his own and his wife's apartments. At present the stone coping that is to support the iron fence is being laid. At intervals of 20 feet stone columns will add decorative and substantial value to the wrought iron of the fence, which is to be ten feet high.

Many people are disappointed by the plainness of the house; but as it is Mr. Carnegie has pronounced it "too fancy" to suit him. It will be completed in about one year.

DRANK POISON AND WENT AWAY

James P. McElhaney Takes His Life in Most Dramatic Manner.

CHOSE A FITTING SCENE FOR TRAGEDY

Body Was Found by Boys Playing Baseball—He Had Lost an Arm and Was Out of Work—Other Cases for the Coroner.

"Now you will get rid of me." With these words upon his lips James P. McElhaney in the presence of his family poured a bottle of poison down his throat. They were his farewell words. He left the house, 2536 Wylie avenue, and at 11 o'clock yesterday morning his lifeless body was found in a gulley back of the Municipal hospital at Morgan and Branch streets.

The man's threat to take his life did not alarm his relatives. When he left the house he did not seem to be suffering from the effects of the poison. For three years he had not lived with his family, and his coming home was looked on as an attempt to frighten them.

After drinking the potion he had tramped over the Bedford avenue hill, a distance of three-quarters of a mile, to his death retreat. A more solitary, dread-inspiring spot could scarcely have been chosen. A few yards away the dreary walls of the hospital threw their shadow over the dying man. Below is the Grant boulevard, and further down is the precipice along the Pennsylvania railroad.

Louis Funk, a boy of about 15, was playing ball with a number of companions yesterday morning in a vacant lot near the spot. Young Funk was following a flying ball and found the suicide's body. McElhaney was lying on his back with the traces of terrible agony on his countenance. He had been dead several hours.

The boys notified James Snape at engine house No. 26. The fireman found a card in McElhaney's vest pocket on which he had written his name and address and the address of his son-in-law, Thomas Maurice. The names had been written with a lead pencil, evidently as a mark of identification.

The facts regarding the man's threat to commit suicide were told to the coroner by Thomas Maurice. He said that McElhaney had had no permanent place of residence since leaving his family.

Mrs. McElhaney is a dressmaker. She said that she had not seen her husband for three weeks, and that he had not been engaged in any regular occupation since he had left his position in a brick yard several years ago. McElhaney, who was 49 years old, lost his left arm while employed in the brick works.

The body of a man, with a long gash on his head, was found yesterday morning near Munhall. It was thought a murder had been committed and three men were arrested.

Deputy Coroner Buchel went to Homestead, investigated the case and held an inquest. The dead man was James Bell. He, together with his brothers John and William and John Skelly, all puddlers, came from Leetonia, O., the day before, in search of work. Not finding it they got drunk. They went up the railroad toward Munhall and lay down on the bank above the river. When they awoke James Bell was dead. It is supposed that he rolled over the bank and that the gash on his head was cut by a cinder.

Miss Mary Ann Wallace, aged 56 years, died suddenly yesterday morning at her home, 2257 Gibson street. Paralysis of the heart following grip, was the cause.

M. A. Sundren of Estrella street, Thirty-eighth ward, died at the South Side hospital from injuries received on the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad.

Miss Sarah Bownall, aged 18, died suddenly at her home in the Thirty-second ward.

GOV. NASH WON'T REFUSE.

Ohio's Chief Executive Not Averse to Renomination, Says His Secretary.

COLUMBUS, O., May 30.—The following statement was given out by F. N. Sinks, private secretary to Gov. Nash, to-day:

"Since the return of Gov. Nash from California, some doubts have been expressed as to whether he would be a candidate for renomination, owing to the condition of his health. Some have even have it that the governor himself has positively declined to allow his name to be considered. There is absolutely no foundation for such a rumor. The governor stands to-day in the same position he did some months since when he said that if the Republican party desired to honor him with a renomination he would accept it.

"There is no probability of Gov. Nash's health interfering with the work of undertaking a campaign. The governor is improving in a manner entirely satisfactory to his physicians, and they are confident of his early and complete recovery."

M'LAURIN REPLIES TO SENATOR TILLMAN

PROPOSES TO RETIRE HIS COLLEAGUE TO PRIVATE LIFE.

Charges Tillman With Uttering Malicious Falsehoods About Him and Asserts That He Is, and Always Has Been, a Democrat—As a Pitchforkless Pigmy Tillman Would Be a Blessing to the State.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 30.—Senator John L. McLaurin issued an address to the people of the state from his home in Bennettsville to-day. He opens by saying that the recent address to the people by Senator Tillman makes it necessary that he should say something in explanation of his motives and actions, and that "had it not been for Senator Tillman's intrusion upon the Gaffney meeting there would have been no necessity for it. A joint debate was precipitated by him contrary to my wishes and of the gentlemen who invited me."

He continues: "It is too late now to consider whether it was wise or unwise, and the people must judge between us. I desire to announce my candidacy in opposition to the senior senator for the unexpired long term, and I will discuss with him in a fair and reputable manner the policies of the party and before it to you to judge who can more honestly and honorably represent you in the United States senate. In 1897 I was elected to the senate as a Democrat, and I am still a Democrat."

Senator McLaurin says that his recent Greenville speech gave the people the reason for his official actions since 1896, but that the address of Senator Tillman makes it necessary for him to say he is a Democrat and continues:

"The senior senator charges that I am a Republican and was organizing a Republican party here. It be believed this charge why did he consent to run with me in a Democratic primary? I denounce the charge as an infamous falsehood and the senior senator knows what he says is untrue. He knows that the dispensary of the public patronage has been placed at my disposal and unlimited money is furnished me by Republicans to aid in the scheme of the organization of a new party. I denounce this as a malicious falsehood.

"The people shall judge of our Democracy and not the senior senator. The senior senator is addicted to making reckless and false charges against others which he never substantiates. An honest man is always chary in charging others with dishonesty; the thief often cries 'stop thief;' he is an ambitious boss and habitual disturber of the political peace and harmony of South Carolina."

Senator McLaurin closes as follows:

"Fellow-Citizens: There will never be anything like unity or quietude among our people until he is relegated to private life. His incendiary appeals to class hatred and prejudice, such as he made at Gaffney to factory operatives, and his dictatorial spirit and utterances will keep up dissensions and discord in the state. With the aid of the people I will make a heroic effort to break down bossism, with its train of political evils and I invite all good citizens to assist me to inaugurate an era of free thought, free speech and independence of action in South Carolina. The senior senator in the quietude of a farmer's life in Edgefield county could be viewed as a pitchforkless pigmy, and a blessing to the state."

HEIRS TO $11,000,000.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company Forced to Disgorge for the Scotch Dye Family.

MARION, IND., May 30.—(Special.)—The heirs of John Dye, a Scotchman who settled in Pennsylvania in the pioneer days of that state, have the assurance of an estate valued at $11,000,000. Irvin Dye, the young man who was murdered in the Black Prince saloon in this city last March, and whose murder remains a mystery, would have been one of his heirs.

His grandfather, John M. Dye, who lives at Wabash, Ind., was the son of John Dye, the Scotchman who purchased the Pennsylvania lands. John had two sons, Christopher and John. Christopher left his parents in Pennsylvania and went to Ohio, where he died. John M. Dye came to Indiana. The parents died and John M., who was the only remaining child, did not think the rough land in Pennsylvania was of any value and never laid any claim to it.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company took charge of it, and it is now in the heart of the great anthracite coal fields. John M. Dye began investigation about a year ago, and with the assistance of a detective and an attorney, located the land and entered suit for possession. The Pennsylvania Company compromised with Dye by agreeing to give him a third interest in the property, which is valued at $11,000,000. Dye received a check from the Pennsylvania Company for $1,000 to defray his expenses to Washington and to secure the proper papers and papers for a clear title to the land.

Dye will leave for Washington Monday to finish his work and secure his fortune, which is to be divided among the heirs who live in Marion, Wabash, Lafontaine and Peru, Ind.; New York and Ohio.

QUAY EAGER TO AMEND CHARTER

Muehlbronner Has Proposed Changes Ready, Waiting to Hear the Word.

STRONG EFFORT COMING FOR BALLOT LAW

Senator Focht Will Ask to Have the Bill Recommitted for Amendments and Promises It Will Be Put Into Satisfactory Shape.

BY CHESTER D. POTTER,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, PA., May 30.—Senator Quay and his son, R. R. Quay, left for Beaver at midnight. The senator intends to return here next week.

"The legislature seems to be interested in practical legislation, and to that I take delight of the charter," said the senator when I asked him what he knew of supplemental legislation for the "ripper." This was the only reference the senator made to the important measures introduced by Senators Focht and Emery.

"As to the charter," continued Col. Quay, "I think Charlie Muehlbronner should introduce the amendments in his possession. They have been agreed to by the Pittsburgh and Allegheny people, and an effort should be made to pass them."

Regarding ballot reform the senator said there would be a strong effort made to pass the Focht-Guffey bill, which was recommitted for amendment by the senate to-night.

"I am ready to present the supplemental senator legislation whenever Senator Quay and the other leaders ask me to do so," said Senator Muehlbronner. "I have all of the amendments ready, and it is probable that I will see the senator Saturday or Sunday, and if he thinks there is a chance to secure supplemental legislation I will present them Monday night."

When asked about the probable changes Senator Focht, who is chairman of the senate elections committee, said: "I [illegible] to have the bill recommitted to make [illegible] number of amendments corrective of [illegible] technical mistakes. The most important [illegible] judiciary which will be an additional provis[illegible] which will enable any 30 citizens of [illegible] district to petition the court to [illegible] the ballot box of that district opened where reasonable evidence of fraud has been committed can be produced. The bill will be reported at once and offered for the consideration of the senate and house. The bill in its amended form will meet in full the pledges made by the Republican party in the platform of 1900. Every party will be given a circle, the opportunity to vote will be wide open, the Australian system will be incorporated and the ballot will be one-third the size of the present blanket sheet."

When asked whether he believed the bill would pass Senator Focht replied: "Yes, I believe it will pass and receive the votes of many Democrats and have the united support of all Republicans, and I believe the governor will sign the bill."

VETERAN MURDERED WHILE ON THE MARCH

Shot Down on the Way to the Cemetery to Decorate His Comrades' Graves.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

ST. JOSEPH, MO., May 30.—A tragedy marred the Memorial day services at Bethany, this state. John Price, an old soldier who was marching in the procession, which was on its way to the cemetery, was murdered by his brother-in-law, Aut Miller, who opened fire on him with a revolver. The veteran was hit by several of the bullets and died in the arms of his comrades before he could be removed from the street. One of the bullets flattened itself on the Grand Army badge which he wore over his heart.

Miller, who had been drinking heavily during the day, escaped in the excitement and ran to his home. When a searching party arrived there on the hunt for him they found only his dead body. He had blown out his brains.

Price and Miller were brothers-in-law, having married sisters, but had been on bad terms for some months. Both are members of prominent Harrison county families. Miller had frequently made threats against the life of Price, but the murder was wholly unexpected. The town was so excited over the killing that the Memorial day exercises were carried out by a small detachment of the old soldiers.

Bad Exposition Weather.

BUFFALO, May 30.—Some of the features of to-day's program at the Pan-American exposition were abandoned because of the inclement weather. Rain fell at frequent intervals. Excursion trains from nearby towns were not crowded. The attendance at the grounds was the largest since the opening day of the exposition, with the exception of Dedication day.

RAPID TRANSIT HAS THE VOTES

On Second Reading the Bill Got More Than Enough for Final Passage.

MAY REACH GOV. STONE ON THURSDAY

This Is Possible If the House Moves as Rapidly as the Senate—Insurgents Holding Aloof—Penrose Pronounces in Favor of Measures.

BY CHESTER D. POTTER,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, PA., May 30.—The rapid transit bills introduced yesterday by Senators Focht and Emery passed second reading in the senate to-night. There was a long vote on some amendments offered by Mr. Herbst (Dem.), who is opposed to the measures in their present form, and the roll was called. The result developed a constitutional majority favorable, the vote being 27 to 3. It requires 25 votes to pass a bill finally, and the showing to-night insures the final passage of the bills to-morrow morning. The vote on the Herbst amendments was:

Nays—Berkebuch, Boyd, Bustin, Cunningham, Emery, Fisher, Focht, Grady, Grundisch, Haines, Heidelbaugh, Herbst, Hutson, Mochtenhaft, Neely, Quaill, Scott, Stewart, Snyder, Speer, Stiles, Stineman, Snyder, Van Valkenburg, Washburn and Williamson—27.

Ayes—Cochran, Herbst and Keyser—3.

The Democrats voting for the bills were Boyd, Haines, Higgins, Neely and Stiles. Those Democrats who voted for the Herbst amendments were Cochran and Herbst. Mr. Keyser, who voted with them, is a stalwart Republican.

Insurgents Holding Aloof.

Considerable comment was caused by the fact that not a single insurgent senator was present. A gentleman who usually knows the insurgent program, explained by saying that, as the amendments were fair and in the interest of the people, the insurgent members did not care to oppose them, and, on the other hand, they would not lend their support until given additional light.

An optimistic forecast made by a friend of the bills is that they may possibly reach the governor next Thursday. There are sessions Monday afternoon and evening, which would make possible first reading Monday night, second reading Tuesday and third reading and final passage Wednesday. There would be no need of acceleration in such a schedule, but it would be quite in harmony with senatorial dispatch.

There appears to be a fixed idea that the bills are to pass finally, the point conceded by anti-administration forces, and the only conjecture afloat is whether there will be any opposition in the house.

But little time was spent in giving the bills second reading in the senate. When No. 582, introduced by Mr. Emery, was reached, the author amended the title so as to make the provisions apply to streets, highways and bridges now occupied by street companies, even though they "are only of temporary use."

Several Changes Agreed To.

Another amendment inserts after the word "charter," in the first section, the 72, the words, "after the approval of this act." Several other amendments carrying out the idea that the provisions of the bill should apply to all streets on which rights have been relinquished, or "only in temporary use," were agreed to.

Mr. Herbst moved that the bill be postponed for the present, but the motion failed on a viva voce vote, and second reading was ordered on roll call.

The Focht bill came next. Its author had no amendments to offer, but Mr. Herbst had. He spoke of the importance of the bills, the rights they would confer on corporations, and he urged delay. He said he was not opposed to corporations, but he was against elevated or underground railroads, it being his opinion that the rapid transit of the future would be underground. He realized, he said, that the bills would pass, but he desired to have the Focht bill amended.

Five amendments were offered by Mr. Herbst, all of them striking out provisions giving rights of way over highways and bridges, and further providing that articles of association shall not be filed with the secretary of the commonwealth until $250,000 of stock for every mile of road has been subscribed, instead of $25,000, as provided in the bill; also that the capital stock of the company shall not be less than $500,000 for every mile of road to be constructed, instead of $25,000, as provided in the bill.

One Decisively Beaten.

Only the amendment to the first section, which cuts out all rights for surface and elevated roads and provides for underground transit, was voted upon, and it was defeated by the decisive vote of Messrs. Widener and Elkins sailed, was a bluff to make it look as if somebody else was behind the affair."

Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, who is here, refused to talk.

Union Company's Side of It.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—Jeremiah Sullivan, a director of the Union Traction Company, who has been identified with the development of horse, cable and electric transportation in this city for the past 25 years, smiled to-day as he read the various comments on the new traction bills.

"All this is easy," he said, "and the bills may be passed, but competition in Philadelphia with the Union Traction Company will be a poor paying investment for those who may be deluded into the enterprise. We have the finest property of its kind in the United States, the best equipped and of the most generous proportions in the interest of the people. We cover practically every street in the city with our lines of franchise, and I fail to see where any opposition company could make the least impression on us. Why, the efficiency of the car service and equipment in this city is the talk of the street railroad men of the country, and every year that efficiency is being unstintingly added to.

"I may say, and say it plainly, that we are not alarmed in any sense of the word by the bills introduced yesterday, any more than we were by the Johnson scheme."

ELEVATED ROADS NOT IMPRACTICABLE

The Traction People, Though, Think Legislation Is Meant for Philadelphia.

Officials of the Consolidated Traction Company of Pittsburgh, those interested in the United Traction Company and the Mellon Traction interests, yesterday professed no direct concern in the traction measures presented to the general assembly at Harrisburg the day before. There exists a belief among these interests that the measures have little significance for Pittsburgh, but it is understood that interests apart from all these have well-defined plans for elevated traction lines from the center of business Pittsburgh to the remote East End. Such a system might be operated over Liberty and Penn avenues, with a loop well out in the eastern suburbs. It would involve an investment of many millions.

Those who are interested are not discussing details, but they feel assured that the project is not only feasible, but that the investment could soon be made a profitable one. They realize that with the present gorged traffic of the railway and traction lines to the Pittsburgh suburbs there is a great legitimate field for investment.

Ex-Judge James H. Reed, president of the Philadelphia Company, which controls the United Traction Company, said yesterday that he believed the new traction bills to be for Philadelphia, and not Pittsburgh. He said that this might be indicated in the fact that the bills were not presented till Messrs. Widener and Elkins had started on their trip abroad. He said that he believes the existing traction interests of Pittsburgh have no direct concern in the bills.

Officials of the Consolidated Traction Company, seen yesterday, asserted that they had no elevated or underground plans which the proposed bills could further. They asserted that the Consolidated is now endeavoring to give Pittsburgh its best traction service at the lowest possible expense, and doubt the feasibility of an overhead system in Pittsburgh in view of the hills.

It is said by those interested in traction consolidation here that the Harrisburg bills will not be likely to interfere with the plans.

FIRST MARRIAGE BY A WOMAN PREACHER

A Very Novel Wedding Ceremony Takes Place in a Turtle Creek Home.

Not "strong-minded," and much opposed to so-called "Woman's rights," Mrs. Mary E. Funk nevertheless did something yesterday that no woman has ever before done in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Funk married a man and a woman. As she is the Rev. Mrs. Funk, she was legally and ecclesiastically competent to perform the ceremony. She did it with perfect unconcern, too, and probably would have been greatly surprised to hear that her action was something out of the ordinary—in Pennsylvania.

The bride and groom were Miss Ora R. Steiner and William F. McNelly, and the novel ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Orilla Steiner, on Brown avenue, Turtle Creek. The attendants were George E. Steiner, the brother of the bride, and Mary A. Siegfried. The preacher was attired in a plain, neatly-fitting black dress.

The Rev. Mrs. Mary E. Funk is the wife of the Rev. Mr. A. L. Funk, pastor of the United Presbyterian church at East Pittsburgh. She was born in Topeka, Kan., about 30 years ago, and is a graduate of Otterbein university at Westville, O. She is a regularly ordained preacher of the United Brethren church and occasionally preaches. Almost all of her time is spent in assisting her husband in his church work. She not only assists mentally, but with her hands. Next week they are to start on a church that will cost $15,000. They propose to dig the cellar themselves.

COCK FIGHTERS CAPTURED.

Fifty Out of 250 Taken by Wilkinsburg Police and Constables on Thompson's Run.

The Wilkinsburg police and constables surprised one of the biggest cocking mains ever pulled off in this vicinity yesterday afternoon on Thompsons run, four miles north of Wilkinsburg. About 50 of the spectators were arrested and the remaining 200 took to the woods.

A quiet tip was given to the police on Wednesday that something big was "on" that was to be "pulled off" at 6 p. m. Yesterday. Their suspicions were confirmed yesterday morning when they saw scores or more of wagons pass through Wilkinsburg, loads of them with kegs of beer and men who carried queer looking sacks. Shortly after noon Constable H. W. McKalip, with Chief of Police G. W. Snyder and Policemen Jacob Thomas, George McCluckey and Deputy Constables Albert Kennedy, E. S. Davis and Jesse Williams, all armed, drove to the spot in a spring wagon.

The sports were deeply interested in the cockfighting, but when the officers got within 100 yards of the place some one yelled "police." A panic resulted. Some of the sports took to their heels at once. Others, seeing the small number of officers, made fight. Policeman Davis was made the target for the attack, he having "tipped off" the main. McCluckey ran to his aid and the two fought desperately. Davis finally drew his revolver, and Constable McKalip, after knocking down several men, ordered his deputies to pull their revolvers. This quelled the riot.

The officers recognized many well-known business men of Braddock, Wilkinsburg and East Liberty. Many of the prisoners begged to be allowed to put up a forfeit that their names might not be made public. Those arrested will have a hearing to-morrow at 2 p. m. before Justice of the Peace John J. Walker of Wilkinsburg.

A roulette wheel and a faro game did a good business on the grounds and beer and whisky were handled out over a rude bar. The 100 roosters that were to fight were nearly all captured by the police.

CITY EMPLOYES TO BE PROTECTED

Recorder Brown Will See That They Are No Longer Bulldozed.

MUST BE LEFT FREE AS TO POLITICS

Provisions of the New Charter Will Be Sustained by the Chief Executive—The Heads of Departments Must Not Influence Subordinates.

Recorder A. M. Brown will protect city employes from political intimidation and will interfere to prevent employes from losing their jobs for refusing to do the bidding of political leaders. He declared himself in emphatic terms to this effect yesterday when the charge was made by an employe of the city that heads of certain departments were endeavoring to influence the votes of their subordinates at to-morrow's primaries.

One charge was made by Charles A. Finley, an engineer in the water bureau of the department of public works. Finley is a candidate for ward chairman against the machine in the Twenty-first ward, against Councilman J. M. Clark, the machine candidate.

Finley alleges that he and other employes in the public works department have been given typewritten lists of the machine candidates for whom they are expected to vote at the primaries to-morrow on penalty of losing their jobs if they do not obey orders. Recorder Brown yesterday told Mr. Finley to pay no attention to the notices. Finley says the list was sent to him by a clerk in the public works department.

Instructions Are Printed.

The list was printed on a small slip of paper on the back of which is the name of the person for whom it was intended. In the same envelope which inclosed Finley's slip were two other slips intended for men in the same bureau on which were printed the names of candidates for whom they are to work and vote at the primaries. Finley says the slips were sent to him to be distributed. They bear the names of the machine candidates for ward and county committees for the respective districts in which the employes reside.

"There was no name signed to the slips, but I understood where they came from and what they meant," said Finley. "I am ready to make affidavit to the facts, and to substantiate my charges. Employes of both the public works and the public safety departments have received these slips and have been personally notified that they will have to support the candidates of the organization or they will be discharged."

The Recorder Not Sleeping.

When Recorder Brown was asked about the matter he said his attention had already been called to the charges, and that he was investigating and might take some action before the primaries. "The time is short," said Recorder Brown, "and I may not be able to do anything before Saturday. If it is true that any director is attempting to influence his employes in the exercise of their right of suffrage I will certainly have an objection. I will not permit any employe of the city to be discharged or ostracised on account of his political opinions, or simply because he does not agree with me or some other person. I think I have a little influence, and under my administration employes of the city will have the right to vote and support what candidates they please."

The statement of Recorder Brown is fraught with great significence. The public works department, with its nearly 1,000 employes, and the public safety department, with a large force of firemen and policemen, have wielded great power in the formation and maintenance of the local machine which has been built up in Pittsburgh. If Mal. Brown carries out his plan of divorcing the city administration from politics it will have a widespread and demoralizing effect on the organization.

Helped by the Charter.

If the recorder wishes to remove politics from his administration and place the city government on a purely business basis he will be aided largely by the provisions of the new charter. Under the regulations enacted for the administration of the department of public safety, no policeman or fireman can be dismissed from the city service without an impartial trial by a jury equal in official position to that of the person accused. The verdict of the jury must be determined upon plain specifications made by or lodged with the director of the department. The finding of the jury as aforesaid is of no effect until approved by the city recorder. Thus the city recorder has it in his power to prevent any employe of the public safety department being discharged without a full and fair hearing.

Article 12 providing for the election of and appointment of departmental officers, clerks and employes, states that "the directors or chief officers of departments may, by written order, giving their reasons therefor, remove or suspend subordinate officers and clerks, provided that the same is not done for political reasons."

Power of the Recorder.

In case of such removals the successor appointed must be confirmed by select council. The recorder, with the absolute authority over the entire city machinery vested in him by the new charter, has the right to pass upon the acts of the director of any department. If the director dismisses an employe against the wishes of the city recorder, the recorder may retaliate by dismissing the director for insubordination.

In the Twenty-first ward fight, and in other contests throughout the city, it is alleged a number of public works and public safety employes have been compelled to remove their names as candidates from the anti-machine tickets, upon threats of dismissal. They are all said to have submitted because they were in ignorance as to what course Recorder Brown would take.

Recorder Brown's plain position is expected to lead to greater independence, hereafter, on the part of city employes, in their political opinions and affiliations. It may have an important bearing upon the primaries to-morrow, and lead to some surprises in various wards.

A RACE ROW ENDS IN PROBABLE DEATH

POLES' RIGHT TO CELEBRATE ON MAY 30 QUESTIONED.

Americans and Three Other Nationalities Line Up Against Polish Coal Miners—Latter Use Pistol and Knife, Mortally Wound William Kairns and Cut and Beat His Brother With Clubs.

About 100 coal miners, Poles on one side and Americans, Cornishmen, Irishmen and Welshmen on the other, indulged in a fierce "race" riot yesterday at Federal. William Kairns was left on the battlefield; mortally wounded, and his brother, Robert Kairns, had his head battered and his hands cut. The Poles were chased over the hills by their adversaries and the constable. No arrests had been made up to late last night.

The fight started in a saloon at 4 p. m. The Poles were having beer, and one of the Americans said to them: "Back to the mines, foreigners. You have no right to celebrate Decoration Day."

One of the Poles looked sarcastically at the Cornishmen, Welshmen and Irishmen in the crowd, and tauntingly said that he had as much right to celebrate as they had. This remark angered the Americans, and all of them, of four nationalities, started in to give battle to the Poles.

A Polish miner drew a revolver from his hip pocket and shot into the crowd. The bullet found Williams Kairns' left side. The Pole fled for the hills, his comrades trailing behind him and keeping the Americans from catching him. Robert Kairns, who was foremost among the pursuers, was cut across the hands by a Pole he rode about to throttle, and then the crowd fell on Robert and beat him with clubs. Then the Americans went back to William Kairns and summoned Dr. Wilson, who ordered Kairns removed to the home of his brother, John Kairns.

In the meantime Constable Wilson started after the Poles, but returned empty handed. After the two Kairnses had had their wounds attended to, the Americans started out again, but returned without a Pole. It is supposed that the man who used the revolver is kept in hiding by his friends. Dr. Wilson says William Kairns will probably die of the bullet wound.

NEW BANK BUILDING FOR FIFTH AVENUE

Property at Corner of Wood Street Sold to the Farmers Deposit National Bank.

Rumors which have been afloat several days as to who had bought the property at the corner of Fifth avenue and Wood street, and for what it was to be used, were settled yesterday by the announcement that the property was purchased by S. W. Black & Co. for the Farmers Deposit National bank. The information came from a man interested in the deal, who said that a commodious and expensive bank building would soon be erected on the site.

The deal, which is one of the largest real estate purchases ever made in Pittsburgh, is said to involve $850,000. It was rumored at first that a mammoth hotel was to be erected on the site, but this was denied almost as soon as printed. Another rumor was that John Wanamaker was after the property for a department store, and that his agents here who were trying to secure more property on Fifth avenue and Wood street adjoining, were having trouble in securing the leases.

It is reported that W. A. Herron & Sons refused $400,000 for the Patterson corner two months ago. The Reymer plot is said to have sold for $300,000, and the two lots adjoining for $175,000, making $875,000 for the whole plot, which is 80x140 feet.

At these figures the Patterson lot, 86x80 feet, sold for $139 a square foot, or about $5,000 a front foot on Fifth avenue. This is the highest price ever paid for Fifth avenue real estate, and dealers are speculating on the possible cost of other property on the avenue.

Convention of the Socialist-Labor Party Held in Pittsburgh on Decoration Day.

For state treasurer—James McConnell of Wilkinsburg.

For supreme court judge—Thomas Lowrey of Homestead.

The above ticket was yesterday placed in the field for voters to consider and act upon at the election next November. It is the first of the season, and was the product of a convention held by the Socialist-Labor party at 111 Market street, this city.

There were 30 delegates present. Donald L. Monroe of Altoona presided and Valentine Remmel of the South Side, Pittsburgh, candidate for vice president at the last national election, was the secretary.

Most of the session was devoted to hearing reports from different sections of the country, as to the spread of the principles of the party. A discussion on minor changes in the constitution followed. A large increase in membership was reported and the gathering was harmonious and sociable.

TWO PLANTS REFUSE TO CLOSE.

Both Operated by Workmen Who Defy Labor Organization.

HARTFORD CITY, IND., May 30.—(Special.)—Notwithstanding the general shutdown of window glass factories of the country last night, two of the five window glass plants in this city are still in operation, and will continue so until July 1. They are the co-operative plant of the Blaeford Glass Company and the independent concern of the Hurrle Glass Company. The first is operated by the old L. A. 300 workmen, and the latter by the new L. A. 300, or John L. Denny branch.

Efforts were made some time ago to shutdown these factories, but the workmen positively refused to quit work, even when threatened with expulsion from their labor organization. It is said no further effort will be made to close them.

COUNCILS DELAY WABASH PLANS

Vice-President Ramsey Says All Now Depends on Municipal Action.

THE NEW LINE COULD SOON BE BUILT

If Pittsburgh Council Would Act Favorably, Inside of Thirty Days Local Shippers Might See a New Road Well Under Way.

Joseph Ramsey, Jr., vice president and general manager of the Wabash railroad, was in Pittsburgh yesterday, conferring with James W. Patterson, chief engineer of the Gould-Wabash syndicate which has planned and arranged the financing of the western railway outlet for Pittsburgh. Mr. Ramsey said that the report that it's interest had sold franchises and rights of way for the Pittsburgh interest is untrue.

"It is now 'up to' Pittsburgh to pave the way for our entrance here by councils passing the proposed ordinance granting us franchises to cross a half-dozen or so streets, none as street grade and in no case interfering with existing thoroughfares," said Mr. Ramsey. "Within 30 days after such an ordinance is passed we will be building our new line, for which the shippers of Pittsburgh have been clamoring for years."

In furtherance of the Gould-Wabash plan of extending its terminals further east, Mr. Ramsey announced that his syndicate, which now controls the Wheeling & Lake Erie, providing the link from the Pittsburgh western extension to near Jewett, O., and Toledo, O., has leased trackage rights over the Big Four from Wellington, O., to Cleveland. This arrangement was closed while Mr. Ramsey was in Cleveland last week. It will provide for the Gould syndicate either using the Big Four passenger terminals in what is commonly known as the Union station in the Forest City, or the Wheeling & Lake Erie belt to its own passenger terminals on Ontario street may be used.

Object of the New Scheme.

The object of this new Cleveland entrance is to avoid the present angular route of the Wheeling & Lake Erie into Cleveland from the west. The new arrangement will give the Gould syndicate as short and direct a route between Cleveland and St. Louis as that of the Big Four. It obviates the circuitous route into Cleveland by way of Navarre, which would otherwise be necessary over the Wheeling & Lake Erie.

The report of a deal selling the franchises and rights of way of the new Gould interest into Pittsburgh is accounted for by a number of incidents. A proposition was made recently to Chief Engineer Patterson to pay $250,000 for these rights, but was ignored while it was not definitely known from whom the interest it eminated. Recently Mr. Patterson discharged a number of his engineers who had been working near Steubenville, O., their release to take effect June 1. There is also an unauthenticated report that J. H. McRoberts, the Pittsburgh engineer, has sold the rights of the Pittsburgh & Warrenton railroad, which was part of the abandoned Carnegie scheme for a new railroad something after the Wabash plan.

Mr. Ramsey said yesterday that the charters and franchises now held and the work done on the new Pittsburgh line represented two years of work, to say nothing of a similar effort years ago. He added jocundly that Mr. Patterson might well dispose of some of the franchises held "with the simple result that there would be a less crowded list of capitations on the entrance door of the Pittsburgh offices in the new Fitzsimons building. These are the Pittsburgh & Carnegie, the Washington County, the Cross Creek, the Pittsburgh, Toledo & Western, and the Pittsburgh & Mansfield railroads.

Many Millions Already Expened.

Mr. Ramsey, in discussing the situation, said that looking to the Pittsburgh entrance his syndicate had already expended upward of $6,000,000 in securing control of the Wheeling & Lake Erie and in buying Pittsburgh real estate. "The outlet will link with Pittsburgh 13,000 miles of railroad practically under one ownership in the west and southwest," he said. "The matter rests with the public officials of Pittsburgh. It has been in their hands for four months, and in the meantime other interests have secured, with scarcely a delay, much more important and liberal grants. It is Pittsburgh—not the Pennsylvania, the Vanderbilt nor the Morgan railroad interests—that seemingly blocks the enterprise. I know of no antagonism by these railroad interests."

Asked of the plans of the syndicate to go east of Pittsburgh, Mr. Ramsey said there is nothing of the kind in contemplation. He added: "Our objective point is Pittsburgh, and it is more important to us than New York. There are many lines in New York, and very few in Pittsburgh. Its people have been clamoring for better railroad facilities, and the opportunity is here. Our new line, which will be built on modern lines, with an idea of permanency will not have a single wagon road crossing within 15 miles of Pittsburgh. In Temperanceville we will either go over or under street crossings."

Many Improvements Being Made.

Three miles east of Jewett, O., the 66-mile link with Pittsburgh is to connect with the Wheeling & Lake Erie. The latter road is being vastly improved by the filling in of trestles and the lowering of grades and curves, and for the most part is being laid with 75-pound rails. The new syndicate has all its plans laid for extensive new classification yards very near to Pittsburgh and such as no existing interest has now.

Mr. Ramsey said yesterday that he had made no effort to discover or to locate a hitch in councils over the necessary ordinance. He simply regards the proposition as up to the people of Pittsburgh, especially the heavy shippers. Contracts exist for the new syndicate handling a heavy share of Pittsburgh tonnage, but Mr. Ramsey said yesterday that he is not annoyed over the validity of these contracts, adding that the business of the new line will be assured when it can have its rails here.

TOBACCO ALSO COMES IN FOR SCATHING CENSURE

Public Sentiment on These Questions Said to Be Aroused—Members of Synod Visited Geneva College at Beaver Falls Yesterday to Attend the Graduation Exercises, Which Were Very Creditable.

The members of the Reformed Presbyterian synod, to the number of 125, spent a large part of Thursday on a visit to Geneva college, at Beaver Falls, the college maintained by the denomination.

A class of 25 was graduated. The program was a credit to Dr. W. P. Johnston, the president, and to the members of the class.

Quite a number of the members of the synod remained over in Beaver Falls for the wedding of one of the young ministers, the Rev. John M. Johnston of Blanchard, Ia., to Miss Walker of College hill, Beaver Falls.

Promptly at 7:30 p. m., the synod came to order and was constituted with prayer by the moderator, Dr. D. C. Martin.

The death of the Rev. Fergus Slater was reported by Dr. McFeeters.

A telegram was read from Dr. N. R. Johnston of Oakland, Cal. The letter of greeting for the Irish synod of the Reformed Presbyterian also was read.

The chairman of the committee on temperance, Dr. J. A. Black, read a very able and comprehensive report. In this report the committee showed that there is reason for encouragement over the growth of public sentiment among the best Christian communities. The marked growth of the power of the liquor traffic also was clearly emphasized.

The following recommendations were submitted to the synod:

First—That we render thanks to God for the efficient agencies He has raised up to promote the temperance cause, and for the marked progress it has made in our land during the century just closed.

Second—That in loyalty to Christ, our King, we hold ourselves bound to utter with unceasing earnestness our testimony against the use, morality of the legal sanction given by state and nation to the accursed traffic in intoxicating drink, the fruitful source of so much of the world's misery and crime; and that in every way consistent with our position as a witnessing church, we will continue to labor and pray for the overthrow of the evil in our beloved land.

Third—That we reiterate our condemnation of the use of tobacco and traffic in it, and that we affectionately urge those of our members who have become enslaved to this narcotic to break their thraldom to a habit that is admittedly filthy and injurious to health, and is so wasteful of the Lord's money, which if spent for Him would serve to fill the empty treasuries of the church to repletion.

The report was unanimously sustained. Dr. David McAllister, Dr. D. B. Wilson, the Rev. J. R. Dill, Dr. J. W. Sproull, the Rev. G. P. Heath, Dr. H. H. Sprague, P. J. McDonald, the Rev. R. C. Allen, all urged the highest standards of life and testimony in regard to this important question. The church stands on the unqualified condemnation of opposition to the saloon and all kindred evils.

There was some warm discussion over a paragraph in a resolution referring to Mrs. Carrie Nation's methods as "questionable."

"I would move to amend that statement by eliminating the word 'questionable,'" said one delegate, "Mrs. Nation's conduct was not questionable and this report implies a slur."

The Rev. T. J. Allen of Sterling, Kan., said that if the word "questionable" was not dropped he would vote against the entire report.

The "questionable" word was dropped.

BAPTISTS MEET NEXT WEEK.

The Association's Annual Session to Be Held at McKeesport.

Next week the annual meeting of the Pittsburgh Baptist association will be held in McKeesport. At the sessions Tuesday and Wednesday more than 50 delegates will be present and business of unusual importance will be transacted. There are 150 churches included in the association, each of which will be well represented.

The opening of Tuesday's session will be a devotional service under the direction of the Rev. John M. Moore, pastor of the Wilkinsburg church. The annual sermon will then be preached by the Rev. William W. W. West, until recently pastor of the Oakland church, but now pastor of the First church of Williamsport. The afternoon session will be given over to the election of officers, the selection of the next meeting place and other routine matters.

On Wednesday various features of church work will be discussed. Home and foreign missions, Bible schools, young people's societies and similar lines of effort will be talked over. Reports will be read along these lines, and many other interesting papers will be read. The meeting will be held in the First church, McKeesport, but the two other churches of the city are co-operating in the preparations, and will share in the entertainment of the visitors.

Business Suits and Dress Suits for Men.

The nattiest suit, a suit that is remarkably trim and sightly for street and office wear, is the one made of either rough worsted cheviots, homespuns or unfinished worsteds, with indistinct color line effects. Perhaps you know the material under the name of fancy goods.

There are a great many grades of these admirable fancy weaves, but we handle only the kind that are durable and lasting—of best American and English make.

No suit that is fit to wear can be made to sell for less than $10, and that is the starting point for these Business and Dress Suits.

The next price is $12.50, then $15, $18, $20 and on to $30.

Our variety is so extensive that we can fit any male figure, as perfect as any suit of clothes can be fit, as perfect as any made-to-measure clothes.

Blue Serge Suits for Summer wear are favored by men who have a number of years back of them. Indeed some of the young fellows prefer blue serge, but they are not in the majority. Our full line is ready—coats lined and unlined. $10, $12.50, $15 to $30.

Flannel Suits for the going-away trip, and to wear right along through the hot months, are here beginning at $7.50 and reaching $17.50. Plain blue if you prefer; but what is mostly selected is either dark gray, blue, brown and olive grounds interwoven with contrasting stripes. A becoming belt and one of these Flannel Suits and you are fixed for the Summer.

Every man should have two pairs of Trousers to a coat and vest, unless he is long on money and can afford half a dozen suits. Trousers of every material in vogue, beginning at $3.50 and going to $10.

Society's demands are met with Tuxedo Coats, Tuxedo Suits, Frock Suits and Full Dress Suits—comparing in the minutest detail, with tailored-to-measure suits, at about half the cost.

Misses' Summer Suits of Washable Materials.

Let's see the Shirtwaist Suits first—they're the fad and a fad must be looked after, for misses as well as for older people.

There's the Shirtwaist Suit of Gingham with high collar—you can have either pink or blue. The price is only $4.

Another style in Gingham has sailor collar trimmed with embroidery and white pique shield and tie. Colors, red, pink and blue, $5.

Other Shirtwaist Suits of fine striped Gingham, dainty colors, trimmed with pique, $7.

A remarkable line of Gingham Suits in Yoke and Russian effects at $9.50, $13.50, rising easily to finest tailor-made Linen Suits at $25.

Misses' White Suits of Lawn and Organdie, with more or less lace and embroidery trimming, $11, $15, reaching by easy steps $40. Some of the Suits between $15 and $40 are exquisitely trimmed with lace and ribbon.

CHINESE ROW OVER AT LAST

Celestials Agree to Pay 4 Per Cent on the Indemnity Demanded.

KAISER WILHELM HAS DONE WELL

Secured Valuable Rights Without Getting Into a Fight With His European Neighbors — England Got Little or Nothing.

(Special Cable to the Commercial Gazette.)
(Copyright, 1901, by New York Tribune.)
LONDON, May 31.—(1 A. M.)—There is no official information from Downing street, but it is generally believed that the China question has been settled. The Berlin dispatches state explicitly that the Chinese government has agreed to pay interest at 4 per cent on the indemnity, and as the amount of the principal, 450,000,000 taels, had previously been settled, the last obstacle to the withdrawal of the foreign troops and the return of the court to Peking, has been removed.

It has been a long chapter of diplomacy with nearly 12 months of intrigue, but the end has been reached without the partition of China or any disturbance of the relations of the powers. The German emperor has probably scored more heavily than anybody else. He has obtained from England joint rights for the guardianship of the Yang-tse valley, without estranging Russia, and Count von Waldersee has been in command of the allied forces and the most conspicuous figure in the complex diplomatic drama, in which ingenious by-play has not been lacking.

What England has gained from the alliance with Germany is not apparent to close observers. Her interests have not been essentially different from those of the United States, but her diplomatic work has been done more clumsily.

Imperial Military Tournament.

The military tournament opened yesterday by Lord Roberts before an immense assemblage had special imperial features. Detachments from all the forces represented at the inauguration of the Australian commonwealth are massed with contingents of colonial cavalry, infantry and artillery. The Indian frontier village is the scene of stirring maneuvers with a final charge of horse artillery across a pontoon bridge and a vigorous onslaught upon the rebels. It is a brilliant show, with 12-pounder guns drawn by blue jackets and cavalry waltzing and dancing quadrilles and the best military bands massed.

Picked up Art Treasures.

Three pictures encrusted with grime were recently purchased in a curiosity shop by a thrifty husband and wife in Cheshire for 15 shillings each. These, when partially cleaned for the adornment of their modest dwelling, proved to be striking. Painters and experts were consulted, and one proved to be the work of an early Italian master, another was a Corot, and the third was a painting by an early English master. Encouraged by the knowledge that what they had bought for a few shillings was worth £100, the couple returned to the obscure curiosity shop and bought for £5 a canvas, blackened with age, which was in use as a fire screen. This picture, when cleaned, disclosed the name of Del Pombi in one corner, and has been identified as a rare work of an Italian painter. The Cheshire couple is now asking £25,000 for the treasure trove for which they gave a single £5 note.

New Opera Was Dull.

A perfunctory tribute was paid to the Royal Musical college last night at Covent garden, where Charles Villiers Stanford's English opera, "Much Ado About Nothing," was performed for the first time. It was dull and monotonous in movement, and the score contained few passages of orchestration of real beauty. The audience included a large contingent of students from the local colleges. The curtain was raised repeatedly after every act, and there was an outburst of enthusiasm at the close, but these artificial signs of popular favor were not convincing. It was an academic work on a level with the bulk of the art now on the walls of Burlington house. Everything possible was done by the management to promote the success of this Shakespearean opera. It was well staged, the chorus was good, the orchestra well handled, and Susanne Adams, Marie Brema, David Bispham, Plancon and John Coates were in fine voice. What was lacking was music marked by originality and delicacy.

COUNT BISMARCK DEAD.

Second Son of Famous German Chancellor Died in Prussia.

VARZIN, PRUSSIA, May 20.—Count William Bismarck, second son of the late Prince Bismarck, died to-day after a brief illness. He was born in 1852.

BERLIN, May 30.—Count William Bismarck died after an illness of six days. The cause of death was peritonitis, from which he had suffered greatly. His funeral will occur next Monday, which is the day set by the emperor for the unveiling of the statue of his father. Prince Bismarck, erected in front of the reichstag building. It had never been certain that the members of Prince Bismarck's family would attend the unveiling of the statue, and now the attendance is impossible.

The emperor is reported to-night as unwilling to postpone the unveiling of the Bismarck statue, as the preparations for the ceremony are all complete and thousands of guests from Germany and elsewhere have been invited to be present. It is possible that a change may be made at the last hour and the ceremony postponed. The newspapers to-night contain obituary notices of Count William Bismarck. Few of them are complimentary and the majority point out that the son possessed all his father's foibles without his father's greatness. Count William Bismarck leaves a widow, whose maiden name was Sybil von Arnim, three daughters, and one son.

MORE DEPUTIES WITHDRAW.

Socialists of France Seem Much Disturbed at Present Time.

PARIS, May 30.—The recent split in the ranks of the Socialists at Lyons, caused by the defeat of a resolution in the Socialist congress, which declared M. Millerand, the minister of commerce, had placed himself outside the party by accepting a portfolio in a bourgeois cabinet, is bearing fruit. Eight deputies, including M. Vaillant, who retired from the congress on the defeat of the motion to expel M. Millerand from the party, have announced their withdrawal.

The Socialist group in the chamber of deputies intend to organize a new group, thus weakening the government, hitherto supported by these deputies. Other Socialists are expected to follow the example of their colleagues and withdraw from the party.

WARM GREETING TO WILHELMINA

QUEEN OF HOLLAND WITH HER HUSBAND TOASTED AT POTSDAM

Emperor William Told Her She Was Considered a Member of Germany's Royal Family—Would Always See Warm Relations Between the Two Countries—Wilhelmina Made Neat Reply to Kaiser's Speech.

POTSDAM, May 30.—Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry arrived here to-day. They were received at the station by the emperor and empress of Germany, who accompanied them to the new palace. The visitors were warmly cheered.

The zapfenstelch, given to-night in honor of the queen, was a most interesting ceremony. The bands played a number of old Netherlands hymns. All the assembled troops presented arms when the hymn called, "Wilhelmus Nassau," was rendered.

Maj. John B. Kerr, United States military attache at Berlin, who has just received news of his promotion to a lieutenant colonelcy, attended the ceremonies here at the special invitation of the emperor.

At the banquet given at the new palace in honor of Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Henry, Emperor William in a speech of welcome to-night said:

"Not as a friend do we greet your majesty to-day on your second visit to our house. The first time you came in your childhood. Now you come in the springtide of life, and by the side of your beloved husband, who is of genuine German stock. These halls welcome the great granddaughter of Louisa Henrietta, the rose of the house of Orange. How then can the queen of the Netherlands be welcomed otherwise than as a member of our family and house, and in view of the intimate relations which have subsisted for centuries between my ancestors and yours?"

The emperor then proceeded to dilate upon how much the house of Hohenzollern was indebted to the house of Orange. He said:

"My thought to-day centers in the wish that our greatest God may preserve and protect your majesty's life, and that of your illustrious consort, for the welfare of Orange and of Holland and all that that signified. I add, at the same time, a pledge that love and friendship towards your house will never cease in the hearts of my house and my subjects. In this sense I drink to your majesty's health."

Queen Wilhelmina replying to the emperor, expressed her thanks at his friendly allusions, both past and present, reciprocated the emperor's wishes for a continuance of friendly relations and drank to the health of the emperor and empress. After the torch light maneuvers witnessed, from a balcony, the military tattoo, to which Gen. Bonnal and other foreign attaches had been invited.

HARRISON GREW BITTER.

British Author Didn't Like Big Reception Given to Lord Milner in London.

LONDON, May 30.—Frederick Harrison, the British author and historian, relieves his feelings in a column letter to the newspapers this morning on Lord Milner's reception in London. After speaking of the "insane folly and degrading policy of farm-burning" in South Africa, he continues:

"From the first the nation has been hoodwinked by an elaborate fabric of calumny and falsehood. The accounts of Africa were mere promoters' tales, payable in gold. The myth that the war was inevitable was only true in the sense that the crucifixion was inevitable. These war promoters rigged the political market and gave commissions to the leading politicians. They hired the press of Africa and England, and made a representative of the crown (Milner) their creature.

"This responsible governor of a self-governing colony stooped to play the part which some noble chairman of a rotten company performs at the head of a board of guinea pig directors. He mouthed abuse of the government with which he was sent to negotiate. He misled and irritated the English people and deceived the chiefs.

"War indeed resulted. And now after 20 months of ruin, devastation and famine and deadly hatred planted in a race of men that never forget, we are asked to join in the mock triumph of the author of all this shame and confusion, this ghastly anarchy and undying source of future strife. We are being humiliated and made the laughing stock of the world." Harrison concludes by predicting the Boers' eventual victory.

NO MISUNDERSTANDING.

Berlin Papers Pleased With Situation on Chinese Affairs at Present.

BERLIN, May 30.—There is considerable diversity in the comments of the press upon Emperor William's toast at the luncheon which followed the annual review of the brigade of Guards yesterday. The Kreuz Zeitung points out that, judging from the czar's dispatch, no personal misunderstanding has arisen between the two emperors as a result of the China business.

The Berliner Tageblatt sees importance in "the evident wish of the czar to do justice to Count von Waldersee and the kaiser's wish to do justice to the French." It contrasts Emperor William's utterances with the recent chauvinist address at Troyes, the French minister of war, Gen. Andre.

M. ROSTAND WAS ELECTED.

Famous Dramatist Made Member of the French Academy.

PARIS, May 30.—The Marquis de Vogue and M. Edmond Rostand have been elected members of the academy, in place of the duke of Borglie and Viscount Henri de Boernier. The former's election was assured, but there was considerable opposition to M. Rostand. It recently became known that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt actively canvassed in the latter's behalf.

M. Rostand, the French dramatist, is the son of Joseph Eugene Hubert Rostand, who was known as the "Post of Marseilles," his birth place. Edmond Rostand, who is not much over 30 years of age, came into world-wide prominence as the author of "Cyrano de Bergerac," a play which again brought romantic drama into fashion and of "L'Aiglon." Rostand is reported to be at work on a new play which deals with modern stage life.

Bodies of Infants Found.

LONDON, May 30.—A sensation has been caused at Birmingham by the discovery of the bodies of 31 infants in a cellar beneath an undertaker's establishment. The bodies were huddled together in soap boxes. The establishment was conducted by a widow, who, to-day was arrested charged with causing the infants' deaths.

Flew the Stars and Stripes.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 30.—As the duke of Cornwall and York, in the royal barge, crossed the harbor to-day to inspect the naval depot at Garden Island, all the British warships were flying the United States flag, out of compliment to the United States transport Glacier, which was moored in the stream.

Big Theft of Bank Notes.

Want American Machinery.

LONDON, May 30.—It is said that the British government has decided to introduce new American labor-saving machinery, such as pneumatic drilling and riveting machines, etc., at the Portsmouth dock yards.

RETURNED FROM AFRICAN WILDS

The Presbyterian Missionaries Back After Hard Struggle With Fever.

NATIVES DANCED OVER A WHITE CHILD

The Party Printed a Little Newspaper Under Difficulties, With Only a Dozen Home Subscribers. Experiences of Bride and Groom.

BY J. E. M'GRATH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 30.—A party of Presbyterian missionaries from Africa arrived here on the steamer Germanic to-day, all with one exception more or less in a state of invalidism due to the climactic conditions of their stations. They were Dr. and Mrs. S. F. Johnson and child of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. A. B. Lippert and child of Cincinnati, and Miss J. A. Nassau and Mrs. Dewitt C. Snyder of Brooklyn, all of whom, except the last, were stationed in the Kameroon country. Mrs. Snyder was with her husband in the heart of Africa, 1,000 miles up the Kongo and Kassai rivers. It is not known that any other white woman has ever penetrated so far into that part of Africa.

Mrs. Snyder, who was Miss Gertrude Wood, started for the Kongo Free State as the bride of Dr. Snyder a year and a half ago. They took with them a sectional boat for the trip up the Kongo and a small printing press. The boat served its purpose, but the accessories of the press caused them a great deal of trouble before they reached their destination. The ink rollers were destroyed by the heat and the type was pied.

Notwithstanding these mishaps, The Kassai Herald made its quarterly appearance on time. It had 12 subscribers in the Kongo State, all traders, the remainder of the copies being sent to this country, where they were sold for the benefit of the missions.

The birth of a little girl to the Snyders was an event among the natives. They came hundreds of miles to see the white child. Three days after the child was born 100 natives bedecked with paint assembled around the house and danced in honor of the occasion. After the dance Dr. Snyder regaled them with what is considered by them a great delicacy—salt.

Mrs. Snyder was attacked with fever and was obliged to leave her husband and come to this country. She sailed with her child from Africa early in April. The child died at Antwerp, the day the steamer reached there, and it was necessary to leave its body there. Mrs. Snyder is still suffering from the effects of the fever.

Dr. and Mrs. Johnson were at their station, Efulen, only a little over a year. Mrs. Johnson was obliged to have assistance in leaving the ship. Mrs. Lippert came home from Elat, where she has been stationed for two and a half years, because of illness. She left her husband, who will return in two years. Miss Nassau has been in the Kameroon country for 30 years. Her station was Batanga.

FOREIGN MISSIONS REPORT.

Lutheran General Synod Discusses Proposed Changes in the Work.

DES MOINES, IA., May 30.—When the first business session of the fortieth general synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church convened to-day 250 delegates were present, besides visiting clergymen from Europe, Africa and India. Foreign missions were discussed this afternoon. Among the more important matters for discussion before the synod is the movement to change the missionary field from the African coast and particularly Liberia to the interior for climatic and hygienic reasons.

The report of the board of foreign missions showed that the receipts from all sources during the biennium were $96,386, and the total expenditures $87,253. The board received for the India famine relief funds $23,835, of which a balance of $8,641 remains. The India mine was, at the end of 1900, a total enrolled baptized membership of 20,486, an increase of 15 per cent in two years.

The most important business of the session was the election of officers for the synod to hold for the next biennial period. Rev. D. W. S. Freas of Baltimore was chosen president; Rev. Dr. E. W. Fisher of Shanhokin, secretary, and Dr. Louis Mannin, of Cincinnati, O., treasurer.

A resolution was introduced asking the committee on apportionment to apportion to the district synods for the next biennium, the sum of $80,000, to be raised for foreign missions

NON-INTERRUPTIVE CLAUSE IS TABLED

THE AMALGAMATED CONVENTION WORKING HARD ON SCALE.

Nearly Two Days in Advance of the Same Time Last Week—Boiling Scale Taken Up at the Evening Session—Puddling Rate Will Be $6 a Ton—One Important Scale Referred to Executive Committee.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

MILWAUKEE, WIS., May 30.—To-day the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers got down to business and tried to make up lost time. The non-interruptive scale clause was tabled early in the morning, and the sub-committee in charge of the steel wage scale was asked to report at noon. The scale for the steel mills was disposed of by a vote of the convention referring the scale to the executive committee.

An effort was made to get the steel wage scale inserted in the general wage rise, but it was futile. The committee making the steel wage scale endeavored to get the wage committee to report a uniform scale, but it was found that a uniform scale could not be made to cover the new machinery and processes of the past year. The rate that would be equitable in many mills would be unfair to mills possessing the latest machinery, and in this respect any scale made would be received with disfavor by the manufacturers.

After a long discussion the steel wage scale was reported to the convention with a recommendation that it be turned over to the executive committee of the organization for settlement.

It is stated that there are more delegates present at this convention from the steel mills than was the case at previous conventions, and that the growth of the order in the steel mills has been phenomenal in the last few months.

The steel wage scale was taken out of the wage committee's hands and referred to the executive committee for settlement. No general advance is demanded, but the changes in mill usages and working condition will increase the earnings of the steel mill workers. The other special scales were turned over to the wage committee for incorporation in their report.

Later in the evening session the boiling wage scale was taken up. The rate recommended was one of $5 a ton on a $5 base with a 25-cent advance on each advance of one-tenth of a cent in the selling price of bar iron.

The scale adopted will put the puddling price as of June 1 at a rate of $6 a ton. No general advance is asked in the special steel scales, and aside from the attempt to fix uniform rate the steel wage scale is unimportant.

The convention, in taking up the boiling scale, placed itself ahead of the business of last year nearly two days. The boiling scale will be discussed, but as it is thought the base is sufficiently low it is expected that the wage committee's resolution on a $5 basis will go through without opposition.

A short adjournment was taken to-day to allow delegates to participate in Memorial Day services.

BROKE THE RECORD, A FENCE AND HEAD

Hammer Thrower Fatally Injures a Man Outside the Grounds.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

MERIDEN, CONN., May 30.—Henry Dierle was fatally injured to-day in one of the most unusual accidents in the history of athletics. Dierle was outside the fence inclosing the grounds on which the annual meet of the Irish-American Athletic association was pulling off its event.

John Flanagan, who for some years held the world's record on hammer throwing, made an effort to make a new mark, and his try was fatal. The great 16-pound weight hissed through the air and through the fence behind which Dierle was standing. It came through the high fence as paper and crushed Dierle's skull.

The world's record was certainly shattered, as the point from where Flanagan stood to where Dierle stood was 178 feet 5 inches, breaking the record by 9 feet. Dierle cannot recover.

AN UNSECTIONAL KISSER.

Capt. Hobson Talks About a Closer Spiritual Union Between North and South.

DETROIT, MICH., May 30.—Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, famous for sinking the transport Merrimac in Santiago harbor during the Spanish war, and in kissing and being kissed, was the center of attraction to about 2,000 people at the Lake Orion assembly, an interdenominational resort, about 35 miles from Detroit, today. The event was a Memorial day service, and the opening of the assembly.

Capt. Hobson made an address which was characterized by eulogies of the soldiers of the civil and Spanish-American wars, who gave up their lives in the cause of humanity. Capt. Hobson said, after expressing his appreciation at being invited to speak in the north on such an occasion:

"I wish that the states of the south would all adopt this day for Memorial and Decoration day for the confederate dead, and that the custom would begin and become general for the south to invite citizens of the north to come south and for the north to invite citizens of the south to come north to join together in one spirit in a common memorial celebration for the gallant dead of both sides."

Capt. Hobson said that in his opinion the civil war was a sociological necessity in creating the union of the states. Discussing slavery, he said, that to it we must ascribe the remarkable progress made by the colored population in so short a time. However, he said that he believed that at the time of the civil war it had run its course and its abolition was a necessity "to make the avenue of freedom open for our country in its advance upward with the principle of universal and complete human liberty."

The committee recommendation that the resolution presented at the session of last year amending the by-laws so as to admit ex-confederates to membership was also adopted. The rest of the session was devoted to the discussion of papers.

NEW CARDINAL AND THE FLAG

Martinelli Praises Loyalty and Patriotism of American Catholics.

EMBLEM OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

Bourke Cockran Says Stars and Stripes Are the Fruit of the Teachings of Christ on the Shores of the Sea of Galilee.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Cardinal Martinelli was the guest of the Catholic club of New York to-night at a reception in his honor. Several hundred members of the club, with their wives and daughters, were present. In a short speech of welcome President John Sullivan said:

"We are Americans, proud of our country and of its liberties. And we are proud of the fact that under the constitution of the United States religion is privileged to exercise its benign influence free and untrammeled."

The Cardinal replied: "It gives me great pleasure to hear your president express such sentiments of loyalty to your great nation, as well as of loyalty to the church, for I honestly think that no man can be loyal to his country who is not also loyal to God and religion."

Bourke Cockran made the principal address of the evening. He began by referring to the marvelous resources and prosperity of the United States and said this measureless abundance had come through that liberty and freedom which is the possession of every American citizen. He then asked where was to be found the root of this principle of equality, and answering his own question, said:

"The seed was sown by the shores of Lake Galilee when the Son of Man taught that all men here are equal and stand equal forever. That truth we Catholics believe was delivered to our church and the gate of hell shall not prevail against her. We realize the promises of God fulfilled, and we recognize that flag which is displayed about us here as being as surely the fruit of the teachings of Galilee as the cross is the divine emblem of the religion in which is to be found the origin of our liberty.

"We do not deny that there are non-Catholics who are as patriotic as we are, but we do say that we have the better reason for the patriotism that animates us."

THE DEATH ROLL.

Ex-Representative Hiram Price.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—(Special.)—Ex-Representative Hiram Price died here this morning, aged 87 years. Mr. Price was a Southwestern Pennsylvania boy who went west as a young man and attained prominence. He was born in Washington county. His father was a farmer. He received a common school education and was employed on his father's farm for several years. He then served some time as bookkeeper for a commission house near Pittsburgh.

He went west and settled at Davenport, Ia., where he opened a store. He took an active interest in public affairs, and soon became one of the leading men of the state. He was colonel of the Second regiment for its entire service. One year after the establishment of the State Bank of Iowa Mr. Price became its president and continued so for many years. When the civil war began the state had no public funds, and Mr. Price furnished from his own private means quarters and subsistence for 3,500 men for five months. He was elected governor to pay off these Iowa regiments, and carried the same to them with much personal risk from the bushwhackers in Northern Missouri.

Mr. Price was four times congressman as a Republican, and served from 1861 to 1865, when he declined to again be a candidate. After leaving congress, he spent some time in Europe. When he returned he was again elected to congress, and served from 1876 to 1878, but again declined to serve further. In 1881 he was appointed commissioner of Indian affairs, and served as such from that time until 1885, after the first inauguration of President Cleveland.

GREAT DAY FOR GOLF ON THE LOCAL LINKS

WEATHER MAN HELPS TO SETTLE SIXTEEN EVENTS.

Decoration Day One of the Busiest Ever Witnessed in Pittsburgh or Vicinity—All Local Records Broken for a Single Day's Events in The Vicinity—W. C. Fownes, Jr., Wins the Holiday Cup.

The weather man for once kept faith with the golfers yesterday and the devotees of the links observed Decoration day by putting in one of the busiest days the ancient and royal game ever witnessed in Pittsburgh or vicinity. No championship association matches were on the program, but every club in Western Pennsylvania had plenty of home events scheduled, while the Pittsburgh Golf club broke all local records for a single day's play by deciding six events. The best playing of the day on any of the courses was that of W. C. Fownes, Jr., who won the Holiday cup on the Highland Golf club course with the excellent gross score, considering the water soaked links, of 77 gross, and 75 net. This was the lowest gross score made on any of the courses yesterday. The cup is contested for on each holiday of the year until some player wins it permanently by taking it twice. The previous winners have been in order: D. M. Hostetter, H. C. Fownes, George A. Ormiston, G. F. Elkins and W. C. Fownes. A pot of golf balls was divided by the second, third and fourth men, in ratio of one-half, one-third and one-fourth. The scores were:

	Gross.	H'd'p.	Net.
W. C. Fownes, Jr.	77	2	75
H. C. Fownes	79	1	78
G. A. Ormiston	85	8c	85
C. B. Fownes	84	4	80
C. A. Phipps	94	12	82
Dr. C. C. Lee	97	15	82
W. C. Fownes	91	2	89
H. R. King	103	14	89
F. S. Elkins	104	15	89
H. A. Mathews	107	14	93

SCHENLEY'S HEAVY PLAY.

Mrs. H. G. Brown Won Woman's Putting Contest With Remarkable Score of 13 for 6 Balls.

On the Schenley park course of the Pittsburgh Golf club, the heavy program kept the members on the go from 10 in the morning till almost 8 at night, and it was a question at times whether all the events would be pulled off before dark. The best gross score of the day at Schenley was made by H. C. Fownes with 84 strokes in the second round of the Speer cup, which, with a handicap of plus 3, brought his net to 87. He also won the driving contest with an average for three balls of 204 yards. His net, considering these as well as all the scores made yesterday, it must be remembered that the courses were in dead condition from the recent rains and not near the distance could be gained on drives as on a dry course. The real feature of the day at Schenley was the score of 13 strokes made by Mrs. H. G. Brown in the putting contest on the clock green for the holing of six balls. This was really a remarkable score and will easily stand as the woman's record for many days. In this contest the entrance fee was one golf ball, and Mrs. Brown received two-thirds and Mrs. G. S. Garritt, who was second with 18 strokes, got the one-third elloted for the runner up. The contest was played in the morning and each contestant used six balls, putting from the six of the figures of a clock's face, which was mapped out on the green. The scores were as follows for each of the six balls and totals: Mrs. Schiller, 3, 2, 2, 4, 3, 3—17; Miss Singer, 3, 3, 3, 3, 4, 2,—17; Miss M. Wood, 2, 2, 3, 2, 4, 3—17; Mrs. G. S. Garritt, 3, 2, 2, 2, 3, 2—16; Miss G. Gormly, 4, 4, 4, 4, 3, 2—21; Mrs. R. D. Totten, 3, 3, 2, 3, 2, 3 —15; Mrs. G. A. Howe, 5, 5, 4, 3, 2, 3—22; Mrs. W. R. Shiras, 6, 3, 3, 3, 2, 3—21; Mrs. J. R. Speer, 4, 4, 2, 2, 2, 3—20; Miss Dickson, 4, 4, 4, 5, 3, 3—23; Mrs. R. V. Messler, 5, 5, 3, 4, 3, 3—23; Mrs. H. G. Brown, 2, 2, 3, 1, 2, 3—13; Miss Speer, 4, 2, 3, 3, 2, 2 —18; Mrs. S. D. Speer, 3, 3, 4, 5, 5, 2—21.

FREW WON SPEER CUP.

Net Score of 161 Strokes—W. R. Blair First in Approaching and Putting Contest.

One of the afternoon events at Schenley yesterday was the the second and final round under handicap for the J. Z. Speer cup, which must be won twice for possession, and was captured for the first time last season by Lawrence Dilworth. The winner yesterday was W. N. Frew, who made a gross score of 92, which, with a handicap of eight, gave him a total net score for the two rounds of 161. The best playing in the contest was by H. C. Fownes, whose gross score was 84 yesterday and 82 on May 18, but was swelled each time by a plus handicap of three strokes. The gross scores made yesterday were counted in the first round of the contest for the members championship trophy, subsequent play to be announced later. Below are given the net score for the two days' play, the handicap for each round and the total net score for the two rounds:

	May 18. Net.	May 30. Net.	H'd'p.	Tot. Net.
W. N. Frew	84	84	8	161
G. S. Garritt	78	82	8	171
T. K. Laughlin	92	85	8	185
H. C. Fownes	82	87	8	169
G. R. Scott	90	83	8	173
N. Holmes	86	94	6	180
C. N. Laughlin, Jr.	88	84	6	178
W. M. Speer	90	88	12	190
H. L. Childs	82	94	13	189
S. W. Childs	94	87	8c	181
A. B. Shepherd	96	88	6	189

In the first round of the members championship trophy for which the gross scores made in the Speer contest counted, the scores were as follows: T. K. Laughlin, 87; S. W. Childs, 87; H. C. Fownes, 84; G. M. Laughlin, Jr., 88; H. Griffin, 89; A. B. Shepherd, 91; L. Dilworth, 91; J. R. Scott, 91; W. N. Frew, 92; W. R. Blair, 94; J. McK. Speer, 95; G. S. Garritt, 98; G. M. Laughlin, 99; L. C. Phipps, 99; R. V. Messler, 99; N. Holmes, 100.

In the men's approaching and putting contest, decided in the afternoon on the Schenley links, the winner was W. R. Blair, with a total of nine strokes for holing three balls. The conditions were three balls to each player, to be holed from any distance not nearer than 30 yards. The entrance fee was one ball, the contestant receiving two-thirds, and the five who tied for second honors divided the other third, the scores in strokes for each ball, together with totals, were:

W. R. Blair, 4, 2, 2—9; L. Dilworth, 4, 3, 3—10

Charter Improvement.

Whether or not it be the case that the new charter has taken away from the recorder the veto power which the mayor possessed, the very fact that so important a matter is open to dispute adds to the reasons for supplemental charter legislation. These reasons were strong enough already as the alterations made in the bill during its passage changed it so greatly for the worse that the only justification for them was the existence of an imperious necessity of making concessions in order to carry through the main proposition. Statements and explanations made since create doubt as to whether any such necessity ever existed. But at any rate, there is no reason why the matter should not now be dealt with on its merits, and legislation be enacted to perfect the charter as a permanent frame of municipal government.

That the bill as passed is deplorably defective is universally admitted, and this fact is doubtless responsible for the oblique censure passed upon it by the supreme court in affirming its constitutionality. Had the bill been passed as prepared the court would hardly have employed such language as that "the fact that the action of the state is unwise, unjust, oppressive, or violative of the natural or political rights of the citizens, is not one that can be made the basis of action by the judiciary." The bill as enacted looked as if everything had been subordinated to the purpose of obtaining a change of administration, whereas in the bill as prepared that was merely incidental to the introduction of an improved form of government. Fortunately the defects of the bill produce no immediate ill effects, as the extraordinary powers conferred upon the appointed recorder suffice for all present needs, but the charter as now constituted cannot be accepted as a permanent frame of government.

The President at Home.

Relief will be felt throughout the entire country over the happy ending of the long and tedious journey of the presidential train that bore Mrs. McKinley back in safety to the national capital. As soon as her strength began to return after her extreme illness Mrs. McKinley expressed a desire to return to Washington at the earliest possible day, and it was also the president's wish to get the invalid home again as speedily as possible. Mrs. McKinley bore the fatigue of the journey remarkably well, and the pleasure of home coming to the White House after the painful experiences of her trip will no doubt act as a stimulus to her reviving strength.

Universal sympathy has been with the chief executive in his anxious watching and the hope will be equally as widespread that Mrs. McKinley will soon make a complete recovery.

Europe and Our Invasion.

A Paris paper calls loudly for protection against the impending danger of American competition in Europe, and the Westminster Gazette of London, equally positive that the United States has started on a world career of industrial and commercial conquest, counsels an English policy that will make America England's ally. The London paper also argues from the supreme court decision of this week a growing "imperialism" that will abrogate the Monroe doctrine. It is undoubtedly true, as the foreign papers fear, that America will have an increasing influence on old world industry and commerce, but there will be no abrogation of the Monroe doctrine. That doctrine is designed as a barrier to foreign states making acquisitions of territory in the Americas, and if we grow strong enough in our industries and commerce to startle the old world and make it fear something else, why should we lessen our determination to keep Europe from annexing sections of this hemisphere? Perhaps, however, the Westminster Gazette has, in its imagination, added to the Monroe doctrine, which does not promise that we shall keep hands off territory that is not American. But it need not fear, and Europe need not fear. Our intentions are peaceful. Our invasions will be commercial, and not military; we will do good, not evil.

Venezuela Again.

President Castro's alleged insinuation that Minister Loomis was influenced in his official conduct by his relations to the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company is a belated fling at a man who has already passed through a searching investigation of his diplomatic record in Venezuela and been declared free from blame. If, however, the state department officials at Washington are disposed to credit the accuracy of Castro's interview in which he is said to have made the charges, there should be another investigation made. If Loomis be guilty he has committed a grave crime against the government that sent him to Venezuela. If Castro be only malicious and the charges be disproved he has put an insulting climax upon his recent belligerent and offensive attitude toward the United States in connection with the asphalt scandals.

At the time Minister Loomis returned from Venezuela he was justly censured for the freedom with which he talked for publication, but it will be remembered he had only kind things to say of President Castro. Since his return the state department has investigated the troubles in Venezuela and has exonerated Mr. Loomis from blame. While it is not likely that he will ever return to the South American republic as the representative of this government, he still stands accredited to that country, and President Castro's charges constitute a grave reflection upon the state department, President McKinley and the official recognition of Mr. Loomis' innocence. The whole Venezuelan squabble is growing tiresome and disgusting, fomented as it is by the money-getting schemes of the president of the republic on one hand, and the American asphalt speculators on the other.

Colonial Liberty Protected.

There have been many indications showing that professions of concern for the welfare of the people of the foreign territory of the United States was a pretense on the part of those denouncing the policy of the administration, adopted to mark the purely selfish nature of the opposition. The claim of authority for congress to pass special laws for the government of such territory was made with a view of extending to the people special privileges and exemptions, and to have denied congress this power would have resulted in cruel injustice. This point is forcibly stated by Justice Brown in announcing the decision of the supreme court. He said:

> Indeed, it is scarcely possible that congress could do a greater injustice to these islands than would be involved in holding that it could not impose upon the states taxes and excises without extending the same taxes to them. Such requirement would bring them at once within our internal revenue system, including stamps, licenses, excises, and all the paraphernalia of that system, and applying it to territories which have had no experience of this kind, and where it would prove an intolerable burden.

The truth of this can not be gainsaid, and all this outcry about the constitution, following the flag, and the unqualified rights of citizenship in every territory under the national sovereignty, contemplated the imposition of "an intolerable burden." That which was denounced as an outrage upon Porto Rico was the privilege of exemption from our tariff and internal revenue laws, and had such favor been debarred the result would have been simply ruinous to Porto Rico.

The true motive for all this hubbub, so far as it has not been merely the unreasoning antagonism of party prejudice, has been altogether selfish. The desire of Mugwump declaimers over the wrongs of the Porto Ricans and the Filipinos is to make the retention of foreign possessions impracticable. Under the treaty with Spain our tariff duties cannot be imposed upon Philippine imports, and if no duties can be imposed upon exports from the Philippines to the United States, our tariff can be evaded by preliminary entry of goods at Manila. The Mugwumps would like to see the subject maneuvered into such a position that the United States would have to choose between abandoning its foreign territory or else submit to the overthrow of its own fiscal system. There is no real desire to promote the welfare of the people of our new possessions, but the object is to get rid of them so that public attention can be confined to the problems of domestic policy upon which Mugwump interest is concentrated. This selfish and unscrupulous scheme has been foiled. The aegis of the constitution has been extended over the people of our foreign possessions, assuring them of that conformity between the institutions and the needs and character of a people which constitute true liberty.

What Can We Do About It?

The generation that witnessed and participated in the civil war complains of the tendency of the present generation to treat Memorial day as a mere holiday and an occasion for sports and merrymaking. What shall we do about it? Where men fought for and against the union the gentle processes of nature have covered the scars of battle with verdure and flowers. This generation sees the verdure and the flowers; the older generation knows the scars and the sorrow. The old dwell in memories of the past. Youth rejoices in the freshness and promise of the present. What shall we do about it?

Brave men fought, suffered and died in the long, weary struggle for independence. Other brave men in the second war for independence did similarly. Who now goes to strew their graves with flowers, and what day is set apart to do solemn honor to their memory? What do we remember of them aside from their glorious triumphs? The pain and the sorrow were theirs, and we remember them, not in their pain and not in their sorrow, but in our own enjoyment of the fruits of their victory. This we celebrate each year, but we do not journey to their tombs. When the heroes of the civil war after another generation have all been gathered into the company of the men who fought in the two wars for independence and in the Mexican war, who will continue a day of mourning for them, or will mourning pass away with them and be forgotten in the splendor and strength of the union of the states preserved to us by them? What can we do about it?

Protection for Oysters.

The news that the Maryland oyster industry is in an alarming condition will be received with sadness by lovers of this wholesome and delicious shellfish. The Baltimore American gives figures to show that the Chesapeake bay oyster beds are being rapidly depleted, and that at the present rate their total extinction is a matter of a very short time. There is surely cause for alarm when statistics show that the Baltimore oyster pack of last year was less than one-half the pack of the season of 1890-91, the decrease in the decade amounting to more than 300,000 bushels.

The American points out that France was once confronted with the rapidly approaching extinction of its oysters, but solved the problem by placing the industry under the control of men who understood the propagation and protection of the fish. Maryland is advised to follow this example, and to place the valuable state property in oyster beds in the hands of a commission. Fortunately the oyster can be cultivated, and there is no danger of its extinction if its welfare is properly looked after. Let us have protection for the Maryland oyster beds, that we may continue to enjoy the bivalve from the Chesapeake bay!

Secretary Root could do nothing else than refuse the request of the dismissed West Point cadets for reinstatement. The conception that seems to pervade the student body at the military academy is that the school belongs to those who are attending it and that its official machinery, including the superintendent, is run for their benefit and may be set aside or rearranged to suit their whims. This old tradition needs to be uprooted, and a firm stand by the government in the present instance will go far toward accomplishing this.

There might be considerable heartburning and surprise if the governor of South Carolina should decide to pull the strings that are tied to those senatorial resignations.

A tribute to the memory of Lincoln by the Confederate camp in session at Memphis is another proof that the wounds of civil war are completely healed.

There is no telling what would have happened in the Cuban constitutional convention if we had omitted those banquets to the visiting delegation.

Ohio political conditions indicate that a warm summer is due in that commonwealth, no matter what the thermometers may register.

The weather man showed a becoming spirit of patriotism yesterday and we had sunshine to mingle with our decoration flowers.

BATTLE FLAGS UNFURLED.

Confederate Veterans Wind Up Their Annual Encampment With a Big Parade.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 30.—(Special.)—The last day of the national encampment of confederate veterans was the occasion of an elaborate parade, in which several thousand men in once more the gray, marched again under the battle flags of the lost cause and kept step to the inspiring music of 40 years ago.

Gen. John B. Gordon, who was yesterday elected commander-in-chief of the organization, rode at the head of the procession. Further back came Gens. Joseph Wheeler and Fitzhugh Lee. All three were the objects of vociferous applause. Judge John H. Reagan, past master general in the cabinet of Jefferson Davis and the only surviving member of that body, was a conspicuous figure.

The veterans of the Army of Northern Virginia had the right of the line, while survivors of Forrest's cavalry formed the rear guard.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 30.—(Special.)—It was announced here to-day that President-elect Loree of the B. & O. railroad, has tendered L. G. Haas, superintendent of the E. & P. and P. Y. & A. divisions of the Pennsylvania company, the position of assistant to the president in his new office, and that the latter has accepted the tender.

NEW YORK NOTE BOOK

"Millionaires' Mile" in Fifth Avenue Largely a Pittsburgh Colony—Was Founded by Andrew Carnegie and Helped Along by Henry Phipps.

BY GEORGE C. JENKS,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Andrew Carnegie's plans to make sure of the kind of light and air and surroundings he desires for his new mansion in upper Fifth avenue, is being followed by other rich men who know how to live. The purchase by Henry Phipps of a plot of ground adjoining the site of his new mansion at Fifth avenue and Eighty-seventh street is in line with this purpose. A small matter of $160,000 was paid by Mr. Phipps for the comfort and convenience of a vacant lot by the side of his new home, and he considers that he is procuring them cheap, as real estate goes in this favored quarter of New York. Two five-story apartment houses stand on the plot, but Mr. Phipps will make short work of them. He will have them pulled down and removed, and then he will have plenty of space for a garden and lawn, with no prying eyes to overlook his demesne. Mr. Phipps believes in the future of this neighborhood, which has taken on such importance since Mr. Carnegie began to erect his home, and it was only recently that Mr. Phipps acquired the north corner of Fifth avenue and Ninety-sixth street for $325,000. What he intends to do with all this property has not been made generally known; but, doubtless, he has well defined plans, and perhaps he will talk them over with Mr. Carnegie on the other side of the Atlantic, for he departed from New York for Europe this week, and will probably see the Laird while away. The "millionaires' mile" which Mr. Carnegie has established up in the nineties in Fifth avenue, will be peculiarly a Pittsburgh mile, for most of those Pittsburghers with millions who make up their minds to reside in New York, gravitate northerly to that district, grateful to Mr. Carnegie for his wisdom in selecting the beauty spot of the metropolis for the Pittsburgh colony.

A Chorus Girl Mystery.

Lulu Glaser said to-day that she had nothing to do with the discharge of the chorus girl who is said to have entered suit against her to recover $10,000 damages. The chorus girl says Miss Glaser, when at the head of "The Prima Donna" Company, had complained that she (the chorus girl) flirted from the stage, and had caused her dismissal from the company. She thinks that hurt her $10,000 worth. The amusing part of the affair is the familiarity with which $18-a-week chorus girls bandy about tens of thousands of dollars, making them in Wall street, losing them in the shape of diamonds, and suing for them for damages to their feelings, all with an air of offhand confidence that is most edifying. How a chorus girl who gets a salary of $18 a week is injured $10,000 worth by losing a two or three-weeks' engagement—if she did lose them—is a problem that a jury may have to tackle, unless the press agent gets tired before the matter comes to trial.

Memorial Day Growing in Solemnity.

Everywhere one went in New York today he was reminded that this is Memorial Day. At the foot of every monument raised to a dead hero there were many blooming plants, the Worth monument in particular, at Madison square, being fairly ablaze with geraniums, heartsease, lilies and other blossoms that had been placed there early in the day. G. A. R. men were met in every block, and women and children with arms full of plants were so common as soon to cease to be peculiar. Flags waved on every flagstaff, and there was almost a complete cessation of business, except such as was necessary to carry on the business of living. I say almost, because as one rode along in L trains he could see in upstairs rooms the sweatshop workers who never take a holiday, busy at sewing machines or putting on buttons by hand, as usual, while in other rooms there were cigarmakers and workers at all kinds of queer trades that exist only in New York, passing their holiday as if it were all other days in the year, Sundays included. Take it for all in all, it has been a pleasant day in this city, and there has been a marked increase in the spirit of respect to the honored dead, as observed in the demeanor of the populace at large.

Died a Soldier's Death.

Perhaps if the old veteran who dropped dead in the G. A. R. parade in Broadway this morning could express himself in this world, he might say that he would rather die thus than in any other way. What death could be more satisfactory to a soldier than to fall out of the ranks in the very act of marching to fulfil a duty so precious to the heroes of the early 60's, that of perpetuating the memory of their comrades who gave their lives for the old flag?

Weather Man Good to the Veterans.

The weather continues to be as interesting a topic in New York as it is elsewhere. This morning, with a day of rest and sacred duty dawning, there were more anxious looks at the clouds than usual. The occasional fine rain was feared, not for what it was, but for what it might be, and when the sun did show itself, he was received with incredulity, as something that might not be exactly what it pretended. Happily, the weather was fine at the time that the outdoor celebrations were conducted, and there is a disposition this evening to regard this memorial day as an entire success, from a weather point of view. The official forecaster continues to make lugubrious prophecies of more rain, unsettled conditions, and so forth; but New York feels that it has had the worst that could be provided, and it is willing to take its chances. The pleasant fact remains that it has not rained much to-day, and that Memorial day in 1901 will be remembered as one of the fairest seen here for years.

Broadway Losing Its Gaiety.

The face of Broadway uptown is being changed more thoroughly than it has been in the memory of the present generation. The Star theater has disappeared entirely, and there is a great gap at the corner of Thirteenth street, right through to Fourth avenue, where the theater used to be, that has something pitiful in it. Probably the office building which is to fill the space will be a handsome, solid structure, in which commerce will be fittingly housed; but the average Broadway stroller misses the Star theater with a sigh of regret that no amount of utilitarian argument can repress. The Star was a picturesque structure, and it was a landmark that relieved the rather gloomy character of the neighborhood, built up, as it is, with great wholesale warehouses, where the fripperies and gewgaws offered for sale are handled in such cumbersome quantities that they lose their power of appeal to the lay mind. With the Star gone, Broadway below Union square will be hopelessly commercial, and the gaiety of nations departs from it forever.

The Destroyer in Overalls.

There is a fearful smash at Herald square, for the whole block on Broadway from Thirty-fourth to Thirty-fifth streets is falling under the pickax and crowbar of the destroyer in overalls. A person who had not visited this part of the gay thoroughfare for a month would hardly know where he was if he strolled along there to-day. The houses on the upper side of Thirty-fourth street from Broadway to Koster & Bial's are in a greater or less state of demolition, while the stores on Broadway have either been knocked out of existence or are plastered over with announcements of removal, preparatory to their glass fronts being taken out and their walls sent quaking to mother earth. It looks as if a volcano had burst below, or a seismic disturbance of irresistible force had convulsed the locality. There is nothing remarkable in an old house or two being pulled down to make room for a modern edifice—Pittsburgh is so used to that as New York—but here in Broadway, where associations cling so closely about the buildings being obliterated, the process is nerve-racking. In a very few weeks there will be a great level, dusty space, and then the steel workers will come with their framework and the bricklayers with their material and tools and before Broadway has recovered from the shock of the great ugly rent in its fair face there will be another giant temple of commerce in existence, with a mausoletum of bargain days drawing the thrifty housewives of Harlem, and the achievements of show-window dressers dimming the glory of the matinee hero who has so long posed in this, his lost paradise.

"The Finest" Parade To-Day.

One of the imposing sights that the visiting chiefs of police will enjoy in this city to-morrow will be the annual police parade. The visitors will be placed where they can review the marching platoons of "the finest" to the greatest advantage, and will have an opportunity of judging the police of this city as a military body as well as preservers of the public peace and thief-takers. This annual display is an event of which the police here are proud, and with reason. No one has ever denied that, physically, the New York police force are as fine a body of men as ever stepped along in military formation. They can walk well, most of them ride well, and they all fight well—all three of which are useful accomplishments for men in their business.

Brazilian Naval Visitor.

We have a Brazilian warship in New York harbor. She is the cruiser Benjamin Constant, which left Rio Janeiro on March 28 for a voyage of instruction to the United States. There is no doubt that the officers and crew on the vessel will pick up a few valuable hints in this country if they come in a receptive mood. Uncle Sam is somewhat proud of his own warships and the way they are handled, and he is willing to tell the other fellow how he did it, whenever there is a desire for that information.

Hunting the Hunters.

The hunt for game birds out of season continues. John E. Overton, state game protector, who got a scoring by one of the city magistrates some days ago, is not to be put down easily. He keeps right on looking for illegal game, and to-day he obtained a search warrant from another magistrate, which is good for five days. Even the fact that this was Memorial Day did not lessen Mr. Overton's ardor in the hunt for birds. One of the assistant district attorneys says that 15,000 birds have been found already. There will surely be a scarcity of quail on toast in New York for the next week or two.

Odell Is Business.

New Yorkers had a flying glimpse of the governor of the state to-day. Gov. Odell, brisk and sturdy, as usual, came in from Albany, took breakfast at a hotel with Senator Platt, reviewed the parade and bolted back to Albany. Business—that's what Gov. Odell is.

Fans Don't Mind a Seating.

Records in point of attendance were broken at the Polo grounds to-day. It is estimated that 25,000 people saw the baseball game between St. Louis and New York, and the Giants were beaten, too. But, then, it was a great game, the "rooters" say, and that was the main point, even of more importance than a victory for the home club. Your true baseball enthusiast loves the game for itself, particularly on a holiday.

Gen. and Mrs. Frederick D. Grant to Visit the Princess Cantacuzene at St. Petersburg.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Gen. Fred D. Grant arrived in the city to-day from Washington. He was accompanied by his wife, and is stopping at his residence here. He spent much of the day at the Fifth Avenue hotel, where his mother, Mrs. U. S. Grant, is stopping with her daugher, Mrs. Sartoris, and her son, Jesse Grant. His mother, owing to her age, could not venture out, and her children remained with her in the hotel until midafternoon, when the general and his wife went to the tomb in Riverside park.

On June 11 the general expects to sail for St. Petersburg. His wife and U. S. Grant III. will accompany him, and they will visit their daughter, the Princess Cantacuzene. The general expects a further tour of duty of two years in the Philippines.

Jury Changes Its Collective Mind.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., May 30.—(Special.)—The grand jury which last night refused to indict Sidney Cole, who shot and killed W. T. Terry on the Keystone State, to-day returned an indictment against him for murder.

The Death Song of the Hemlock.

Ye say I am old—I am old—and ye threaten to hew me down,
Lest the roof of your puny dwelling should be crushed by my heavy crown;
Ye measure my spreading branches, ye mock me with idle fears—
Ye pygmies that creep at my footstool, what know ye of age or years?

I reckon ye all as shadows! Ye are but as clouds that pass
Over the face of the mountains and over the meadow grass;
Your generations are phantoms, like
wisps that come and go,
Leaving no trace behind them in the paths they used to know!

But I! For six hundred rolling years I have stood like a watch tower, I!
I have counted the slow procession of centuries circling by!
I have looked at the sun unblenching, I have numbered the midnight stars,
Nor quailed when his fiery serpent leaped from its cloudy bars!

Or ever ye were a nation, or your commonwealth was born,
I stood on this bare, bleak hilltop, fronting
the hills of morn!
In the strength of my prime uplifting my head above meaner things,
Till only the strong winds reached it, or the wild birds' sweeping wings!

It was mine to know when the white man ventured the unknown seas,
And silence fled before him, and the forest mysteries;
I rose—my tower and steeples that pierced the unfathomed sky,
And his proud domes darkened the heavens—but above them all soared I!

He builded his towns and cities, and his mansions fine and fair,
And slowly his fertile meadows grew wide in the tranquil air;
He stretched his iron pathways from the mountains to the sea—
But little cared I for his handiwork!
'Twas the One Great God made me.

The Earth and the Sun and the mighty
Winds and the Great God over all, These bade me stand like a sentinel on the hilltop grand and tall.
Know ye that a hundred years ago men called me old and worn?
Yet here I tower above their graves, and laugh them all to scorn!

For what are threescore years and ten,
ye creatures of a day?
Ye are to me like the flowing motes that in the sunshine play!
Shall I tremble because ye threaten, and whisper that I am old?
I will die of my own free lordly will ere the year has shed its gold!

But till then, as I stood ere ever the land of your love was born,
I will stand erect on my hilltop, fronting
the hills of morn;
In the pride of mine age uplifting my head above meaner things
Till only the strong winds reach it or the wild birds' sweeping wings!

EUROPEAN GOSSIP.

Lord Gainsborough, a Leading Catholic Peer, to Visit the United States. Unhappy Romance of His Daughter, Lady Blanche.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

Lord Gainsborough, who is about to visit the United States, is one of the leaders of the Roman Catholic element in the British peerage, and the chief of the ancient house of Noel, which, flourished as far back as in the reign of King Henry II. One of his ancestors, Sir Andrew Noel, figures in history as a favorite of Queen Elizabeth, and when he ruined himself by his extravagance for her sake, she dropped him with the following distich upon his name, and at his expense:

"The word of denial and letter of fifty
"Is that gentleman's name who will never be thrifty."

The Noels have not always been Catholics. Indeed it was the late earl, renowned for his piety, his philanthropy and for his honesliness, who was the first to vert to the church of Rome, being received into it by Pope Pius IX. himself. It is related that at the decisive audience with his holiness, Lord and Lady Gainsborough were so effected that they wept, whereupon their little daughter, Lady Blanche Noel, convinced that the holy father was ill-using her parents, proceeded to attack him most vigorously with fists and kicks.

Peer's Daughter Becomes American.

Lady Blanche, by the by, died in this country, where she made her home from the time of her romantic marriage with Thomas Murphy, with whom she made a runaway match just 30 years ago. Lady Blanche, who was the sister, therefore, of the present earl of Gainsborough, became infatuated with the organist of her father's private chapel at Exton park. From her interest in the chapel music she was brought into daily contact with the young organist, a winsome, fascinating young Irishman, and in the most natural and simple way it came about that after service was over and the rest of the family and household had left the chapel, she would remain to practice the music with him. It is nothing strange that in the hours spent sitting together after matins and vespers the young and enthusiastic Lady Blanche and the impulsive young Irish organist should fall in love with one another.

After the runaway marriage Lady Blanche found that the prejudices of her family and relatives against her husband on account of his birth were too strong to admit of their remaining in England without being subjected to humiliating ostracism, and so they came to the United States to embark upon a new life, and to earn their own living. Lady Blanche in the realms of literature, and Thomas Murphy first as organist at New Rochelle, and then as organist and music teacher at North Conway. She was a good girl for the Atlantic Monthly, for Scribner's Magazine, the Catholic Review and the Catholic World, etc., and yet found time to do all her household work—for she and her husband were too poor to keep a servant. William Dean Howells was her firm friend and mentor in literature, and was wont to declare that she had the most analytical mind of any woman he had ever known.

Without being beautiful she was a pretty little woman, with a fresh rosy face, framed in thick golden brown hair, very modest and very shy—altogether singularly attractive. She died very suddenly in 1891, her husband surviving her until 1897, and while his remains have found a resting place in this country, hers were taken over to England and repose beside those of her mother in the family mausoleum of the ancestral country seat at Exton park, from whence she had made her runaway marriage with Tom Murphy.

Gainsborough's Picturesque Home.

Lord Gainsborough's other country seat, Campden House, in Gloucestershire, is celebrated as being the highest of English manors, being built on a spur of the Cotswold hills, nearly 1,000 feet above the sea. It is a picturesque pile, with many gables and shells, dating from the time of King Charles I., and occupying the site of a grange once belonging to the great Cistercian abbey of Bordesley, in Warwickshire.

Lady Blanche Murphy's romance is by no means the only one of the kind that has found its ending in this country. There are hundreds of them, perhaps thousands, of which the American public is left in ignorance at the time, for women of the birth and breeding of the sister of the present earl of Gainsborough are not in the habit of proclaiming their rank from the house tops when they come to America for the purpose of escaping the prejudices of the old world and to carve out for themselves a new and happier existence. Few of Lady Blanche's neighbors at New Rochelle first, and then at North Conway, had any idea that the quiet, modest, unaffected and wholly unobtrusive little wife of Tom Murphy, the village organist and music teacher, was the great-granddaughter of King William IV. of England, her mother's mother, the countess of Erroll, having been the eldest daughter of that monarch by Mrs. Jordan.

Partial to American Women.

Inasmuch as the cable dispatches from Europe persist in declaring that Cora, countess of Strafford, the New Orleans girl who married "en-premieres noces" Samuel Colgate of New York, and lost her second husband, the late earl of Strafford, in so shocking a fashion, the unfortunate nobleman having cast himself on the tracks before an express train, is about to marry Paul Cambon, the French ambassador at the Court of St. James, it may be as well to give a brief pen sketch of this Gallic admirer of American women, for his first wife, whom he lost some four years ago, was likewise an American of singular charm and grace, who left him with a son, now grown up, and a cavalry officer who was decorated last year by Queen Victoria with the Victorian order.

Paul Cambon, like his brother Jules, the French ambassador at Washington, is a grandson of that Cambon who was the minister of finance of the French revolution of 100 years ago, and who was responsible for the invention of the so-called "Assignats," or notes, by means of which the revolutionary government extricated itself from its financial embarrassments. He is a lawyer by profession, and after serving as prefect or various provincial departments in France was sent as governor and resident to Tunis, and from thence as ambassador to Constantinople, Madrid and finally to London, in which latter place he is a great social success, talking English perfectly and manifesting his conviction that the policy of France demands that she should remain on good terms with Great Britain. He has most charming manners, shines at repartee and in his younger days was celebrated as an amateur actor. Indeed, I imagine that like many others he sharpened and his manners polished by his study of the stage purposes of Moliere, Mirivaux and Regnard.

MacMahon's Gruff Courtesy.

He was a particular favorite of old Marshal MacMahon, who, when president, first appointed him as prefect, and I recall his dismay at the singular manner in which MacMahon presented crosses of the legion of honor to the leading magnates of Lille, when in response to a request at Cambon, then prefect there, he visited that city. MacMahon did not, as had been hoped, compliment the magnates on their philanthropy or political services, but merely exclaimed in somewhat gruff tones to each as he handed him the decoration: "Here, the prefect has told me to give you this." This phrase was repeated again and again to the end of the function.

Cambon is very independent and has the reputation of only obeying instructions from headquarters at Paris when he approves of them. As French ambassadress in London, Lady Stratford will have a much finer position than that which she enjoyed as wife of the late earl, for foreign ambassadors and their wives have the "pas" over all peers of the realm, and precede even dukes and duchesses. It may be remembered that the late M. Waddington was French ambassador in London, had likewise an American wife, who was Rose King of New York.

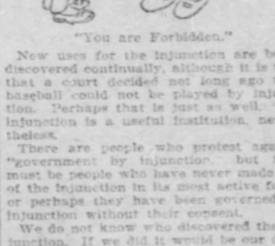
Uses of Injunctions.



"You are Forbidden."

New uses for the injunction are being discovered continually, although it is true that a court decided not long ago that baseball could not be played by injunction. Perhaps that is just as well. The injunction is a useful institution, nevertheless.

There are people who protest against "government by injunction," but they must be people who have never made use of the injunction in its most active form, or perhaps they have been governed by injunction without their consent.

We do not know who discovered the injunction. If we did it would be our duty to start a monument fund in his honor immediately. I would agree to be custodian of the fund and to make no charge for my services.

But all this is wide of what I was about to say. I intended to speak of the injunction in love affairs, citing a case that came up in a Texas court.

A man in that state asked the court for an injunction to restrain another man from visiting his wife. The court granted it. The man who had been enjoined made afternoon calls on the woman just the same, and the latter sat and talked about the weather and the neighbors. This continued until the judge's attention was called to it, whereupon the visitor was cast into prison for contempt of court.

The prisoner straightway hired a lawyer and attacked the injunction as an infringement of his constitutional right to freedom of speech and pursuit of happiness. The court refused to look at it in that light, and held that it was acting within its powers in granting the injunction at the request of the husband and natural guardian of the woman in the case.

Now, it seems to me that if husbands can obtain injunctions to prevent men from visiting their wives, it follows that fathers can invoke the aid of this powerful judicial weapon to keep young men from calling upon their daughters.

It would be an advantage if a father of a large family could procure injunctions in lots with the name in blank. This could be inserted when objectionable young men presented themselves. The careful father could pull the document from his pocket and begin to read:

"You, Thomas Spoony, are forbidden," etc.

That would discourage the

SENATOR DEPEW'S IDEAS ON HALL OF FAME

He Points Out Channels Through Which Americans Are Achieving Renown, and They Are Results of Our Peculiar Environment.

(Special Telegram to Commercial Gazette.)
(Copyright, 1901, by Philadelphia Press.)

NEW YORK, May 30.—When Senator Depew was asked by the trustees of the Hall of Fame to deliver the dedicatory address on Memorial day he asked them what in their view would be the proper line of thought or subject for an oration upon an occasion of this character. Their reply was that perhaps it would be appropriate if the senator were to summarize the character and intellectual quality of the men whose fame and achievements justified the placing of their names in the American Hall of Fame.

To this Senator Depew replied that an oration of that kind would, after all, be nothing but a biography. Biographies, he said, are available to everyone who desire to study the achievements or character of men deemed worthy to be placed in the list of American immortals. The trustees were not able to make any other suggestion, and left to Mr. Depew's discretion both the subject and the treatment of the discourse.

That involved on the senator's part a good knowledge of the purposes for which this unique institution was established. It was created to perpetuate visibly and formally the names of those Americans whose achievements in any way justify the judgment of posterity as to their enduring fame. It was an attempt to establish here something similar in spirit, if not in manner, to the Westminster abbey, or to the French academy.

Forced a Change of Method.

The dedication of a Hall of Fame had no particular purpose in view. It does not call for the exploiting of an idea, of a policy, of a political principle, and it has been with subjects of that kind that Mr. Depew has had chiefly to deal in almost all his recent addresses. It seemed to him, therefore, that the only appropriate address for him to deliver was one based upon a philosophical study of the impulses, the traditions, the environment, and all of the other influences that have made possible distinctly American achievements sufficient to entitle him who had thus achieved to be ranked with those who possess fame as distinct from reputation or notoriety.

Having come to that determination, Senator Depew decided that it would be necessary for him, for various reasons, to depart from a custom followed by him for so many years when preparing his addresses. It has been his habit when the moment came when it was necessary to prepare an address first to give careful thought to the subject, to determine the line of treatment, to turn to his library and study the authorities for illustrations or examples, and then summoning his stenographer, to pace back and forth while dictating the address.

But on philosophic expositions or an academic address not aimed at any immediate practical result, or for the purpose of influencing opinions or explaining policies, it would be essential for him wholly to discard the stenographer and take up the pen.

Subtle Power of the Pen.

An address of that kind involves both niceties and subtleties of thought, as well as lucid and yet polished expression of the thought. To do this satisfactorily, compelled, in the senator's opinion, the writing out of the address. There is an inspiration to finer felicities of expression, to subtler shading of thought and profound conceptions, when the pen is in hand, than when dictation is employed. A brief, a legal argument, a political address, an appeal or a demonstration of the truth of some policy, may be effectively set forth through the dictated word, and that has, too, a certain charm of spontaneity always associated with true extemporaneous utterance which is denied the more carefully prepared or written discourse.

So Senator Depew for the first time in years took his pen to write the address delivered to-day at the dedication of the Hall of Fame. As he considered the subject he discovered that fame in the United States, the kind of fame that justifies the recognition and acknowledgment of prosperity, is based almost wholly upon powerful, original thinking, followed by material, physical achievement of which this thought was the inspiration. For that reason there is no fame as yet for any American due to a picture, or a poem, or the opera, or the oratorio, since for the highest achievements of that character the history of the world has shown that there must be a background of centuries mellowed by time and conditions.

Basis of Fame in America.

So, in his study of the subject, Mr. Depew discovered that fame in the United States has come chiefly as a result of the higher development of democracy. We have, in this view, as a result of this environment, of the democratic tendencies which have always prevailed here, notwithstanding some great distinctions due to wealth or to family forced the American intellect into the consummation of prodigious material achievement; and yet it seemed to Mr. Depew as though the wonderful intellects that have subjugated the United States to the comfort of all its citizens to the wealth and prosperity of the world would under other conditions and in other lands have brought for us Shakespeares or Carlyles or Miltons. It seemed to Senator Depew as though it could not be gainsaid that the intellects great enough whose achievements were enduring enough to be commemorated in the memorial Hall of Fame would, if our period of revolution were over, if the passion for quick wealth and enormous riches were gone, give to America some new Michael Angelos or Raphaels or Shakespeares or Tennysons.

His idea was that the imagination, the created faculty great enough to have conceived and achieved in another age some of the powerful intellectual inspirations that are recorded in books or pictures or architecture or music has been developing our tunnels, our colossal systems in railways, the mastery of the secrets of electricity and other laws of nature and the giant combination of corporate bodies through the most skillful and delicate and yet far-reaching adjustment of financial values.

Genius in Practical Channels.

There is one sentence in Mr. Depew's speech that was very carefully penned that will be certain to cause much controversy. When one of the most brilliant of the financial geniuses of this city asked a man, whose vocation is literature, why there is no great literature in the United States now, the reply was that the greater imaginations of this generation, as of every year since the utilization of steam and electricity and the commercial use of chemistry and natural philosophy, have engaged in other forms of expression than that of literature, or of music, or even of architecture. The genius that created some of the world's noblest architectural triumphs was fully matched by the transcendent imagination that conceived the Brooklyn bridge, built it mentally to its uttermost finish and detail, saw it completely pictured in the mind's eye, and then afterward saw it in its noble completeness, in the simplicity of its lines and the massiveness of its form, exactly as it had been photographed upon the mind before the first stone was laid. It was with this thought in view that Depew wrote these words:

"We have no Tennysons, nor Longfellows, nor Hawthornes, nor Emersons. Perhaps it is because our Michael Angelos are planning tunnels under rivers and through mountains for the connection of vast systems of railways, and our Raphaels are devising some novel methods for the utilization of electric power; our Shakespeares are forming gigantic combinations of corporate bodies; our Tennysons are giving reign to fancy and imagination in wild speculations in stocks, and our Hawthornes and Emersons have abandoned the communings with and revelations of the spirit and soul which lift their readers to a vision of the higher light than the joy of its inspiration, to exploit mines and factories."

Imagination in Material Exploits.

This sentence will be repudiated by those who claim that there can be no intellectual connection or similarity between those who do material things, no matter of how great consequence, and those who live in the realm of pure thought and give expression to what they see and hear with the inspired inner eye and ear. But there has been growing for some time in this city on the part of those whose opportunity it is to come into close touch with the men who are achieving great material things an impression that the very highest qualities of imagination, as well as the most profound reasoning powers are entailed by the consummation of some of the higher material achievements.

It was a mind not all mastered by the reasoning or calculative faculties, but in no small measure inspired by imagination that swept into one colossal combination the greater part of the iron and steel industries of the United States. Mr. Hill is a dreamer, and his achievements in the northwest, and his conception, not only of a transcontinental, but a transmundane line, was born of dreams that were expressed not in words but in deeds.

It was those thoughts Mr. Depew had in mind when he wrote the paragraph just quoted, and it is probably the key or central thought of an oration which will stand comparison with any of his more careful efforts. It was that thought that suggested to him the brief, but impressive mention of Abraham Lincoln, who was a dreamer, a thinker, the writer of a classic that is to endure while the English language lasts that Mr. Depew says condensed the philosophy and pathos of the civil war into an address of ten minutes' length at Gettysburg.

The Hall of Fame is beautifully situated, not on Morningside heights, as probably the majority of the citizens of New York believe, but on University heights, which are on the northern bank of the Harlem river, about two miles north of the beautiful bluff whereon stand the conspicuous buildings of Columbia university, Grant's tomb and the beautiful arch that is to connect the choir of the cathedral of St. John the Divine with the cathedral itself. University heights is so named for the University of New York, under whose patronage and authority the Hall of Fame was established.

MAY SELL OUT.

The People's Insurance Company Considering a Proposition for the Purchase of Its Stock.

The People's Insurance Company, of which John Farrell is president and William F. Gardner secretary, will probably be out of business in a few days. An offer of $50 a share has been made for the whole or a majority of the company's stock. There are 5,000 shares of a par value of $37 50, a total of $150,000. At the report made January 1 the net assets were $213,230 50, and there was a net surplus of $32,958 15.

Secretary Gardner, when approached yesterday was very reticent, but finally said: "There is an offer of $50 a share for all, or a majority of the stock of the company. It was made by Pittsburgh parties, but who they are I positively refuse to say. The offer was submitted to the board of directors, a majority of whom were in favor of submitting the proposition to the stockholders. This we have done, sending each stockholder a letter. When there will be a meeting of the directors or stockholders I cannot say—probably not for two weeks.

"I think the offer should not have been considered," continued Mr. Gardner. "The company is in a prosperous condition, and for the past eight years has paid dividends. The price offered for the stock is itself proof that the company is in a prosperous condition. The par value is $37 50 a share."

President Farrell was seen just as he returned from the east last night. He flatly refused to talk on the offer, further than to acknowledge that one had been made. When asked whether the offer came from a Pittsburgh company or people interested in a Pittsburgh company, he declined to answer.

There will be a meeting of the directors as soon as a majority of the stock is heard from. If the majority is in favor of accepting the offer a meeting of the stockholders will be called, when the officers will be instructed to wind up the affairs of the company. This latter meeting could not be much before the last of June.

INDUSTRIAL HOUSE.

Woods Run Institution That Will Help the Poor to Help Themselves.

Application has been made by Mrs. F. J. Torrance, Lydia L. Burchard, Frances W. Follansbee, Jeannette C. Kennedy, Elizabeth O. Wickersham and others for a charter to form the Woods Run Industrial house.

This is virtually the Improvement of the Poor society that was started in 1892, and which did good work during the panic by distributing food and clothing to the needy in the Woods Run district. For some time past they have occupied a dwelling on McClure avenue, which has been turned over to the society by the owner, Francis J. Torrance.

The working of the Industrial house will be somewhat different from that of the Improvement of the Poor society. Heretofore anyone needing clothing could go to the society rooms and sew, the materials being furnished them, but under the new plan it is proposed to permit anyone either to sew for themselves or to have their product sold.

When enough money is secured it is the intention of the association to erect a new building at a cost of $10,000 or $15,000, and it is with this in view that a charter has been asked for.

Rough Rider Saves an Armful of Kindling and Goes to Central Station to Dry His Clothes.

Henry Kruger, who says he was one of Roosevelt's rough riders, yesterday afternoon rescued himself from the turbulent tide of the Monongahela and gracefully handed himself over to the police. He walked into central station, and with chattering teeth asked for the "judge." Sergt. Adolph Metz undertook to examine the man. This dialogue followed:

"Where do you reside, Mr. Kruger?"
"Hope hotel on Liberty street."
"You mean the Hope mission."
"All right."
"How did you get into the river?"
"I slipped in."
"How?"
"A little girl was walking along the bank with an armful of wood and the wood dropped into the water. I am a rough rider, you know, and heroically ran to save her wood."
"Hold on there, Mr. Kruger. Just tell me how you earn your living."
"I don't understand."
"What do you work at?"
"Work! Work! I live on my pension."
At this point Mr. Kruger was gently escorted to a cell, where he had an opportunity to dry his clothes.

SOURCE OF POVERTY.

War So Described by Speaker at Lake Mohonk National Arbitration Conference.

LAKE MOHONK, N. Y., May 30.—The subject for this morning's session of the arbitration conference was the influence of commerce and commercial bodies on the peace of the world. Prof. Clarke of Columbia combatted the idea that war was promotive of prosperity. On the contrary, he said it simply gave the present money to expend by mortgaging the future. War was a source of poverty, not wealth.

W. J. Coombs of Brooklyn deprecated our tariff policy in that it aroused the antagonism of other nations as already seen in the hostile foreign legislation. John A. Taylor of Brooklyn followed, supporting the position taken by Mr. Coombs.

Joshua L. Baily of Philadelphia made a plea for a national peace. Other speakers were William Henry Gibson of New York, Robert Treat Paine of Boston, Edmund Glen, Everett P. Wheeler and Dr. Allen of Boston.

LOREE LEAVES FOR BALTIMORE

The President of Baltimore & Ohio Goes to His New Headquarters.

G. L. POTTER ACCOMPANIES HIM

James McCrea Due in New York Saturday — Announcement of Further Changes Will Be Made After He Is Consulted.

L. F. Loree, the new president of the Baltimore & Ohio, accompanied by G. L. Potter, the new general manager, left last evening for Baltimore over the Pennsylvania. Both will take charge of their new offices to-morrow or early next week.

"Until Mr. McCrea returns nothing can be said of the use of the Union station, Pittsburgh, and the tracks of the Ft. Wayne from South Chicago to Chicago, for the Baltimore & Ohio," Mr. Loree said yesterday. "The same is true of the election of the new fourth vice president and the general manager."

When James McCrea, first vice president of the Pennsylvania lines west and a director of both the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore & Ohio railroads, returns, several more promotions and changes in both the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania lines west will be announced. Mr. McCrea is a passenger on the steamer St. Louis, which is expected in New York harbor late this evening or early to-morrow morning. Last night his private car was taken east to be ready for him at New York.

In all except the formal election it is settled that J. J. Turner will take the position of fourth vice president vacated by Mr. Loree. It is also expected with almost equal confidence that G. L. Peck, general superintendent of the Panhandle, will succeed Mr. Potter. For this position J. W. Renner, now comptroller of the lines west, also has been mentioned.

NEW P. & L. E. LINE TO SHARON.

Mahoning Division of the Erie from New Castle for Passengers.

Negotiations are about completed for the use of the Mahoning division of the Erie railroad by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie for through traffic service from Pittsburgh to Sharon. The Pittsburgh & Lake Erie will use its own tracks as far as New Castle, and from New Castle to Sharon the tracks of the Erie will be used. The present passenger arrangement of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, using its own tracks to Youngstown and then the Sharon branch of the Lake Shore to Sharon, gives a mileage of 81. The new arrangement makes the distance from Pittsburgh to Sharon only 60.7 miles.

The distance from New Castle to Sharon and from Youngstown to Sharon is about the same, while the distance to New Castle from this city is nearly 21 miles less than to Youngstown. At present a mixed passenger and freight train is run once a day from New Castle to Sharon over the Erie. By the new plan there will be several trains, and nearly an hour will be saved passengers on the trip from Pittsburgh. The track of the Erie is in good condition and fast time can be made over it.

Decoration Day Excursions.

Several excursions were run yesterday out of Pittsburgh on account of the holiday, and on nearly all the attendance was very good, the fine weather of the forenoon promising an ideal day for an outing. On the Pennsylvania railroad there was a large party for the excursion of the stationary engineers at Idlewild. To Cascade park, New Castle and Ashtabula the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie had parties. On the Baltimore & Ohio a large party was taken to Ohio Pyle, and the steamer Iron City, of the Pittsburgh & Western station, Allegheny, a party for Conneaut lake, invited by F. W. Henninger of this city.

Fine Record of No. 6 on B. & O.

There is still talk among railroad men of the run made between Cumberland, Md., and Washington, D. C., by train No. 6 of the Baltimore & Ohio, Sunday May 18. The train left Cumberland over an hour late and arrived in Washington almost on time. Fully ten minutes was lost, transferring a special car to the Western Maryland, as Cherry Run and there were six other stops. The time for the 131 miles, including stops, was a few minutes over three hours. At points on the metropolitan division the train ran for short distance at 90 miles an hour.

Wabash Time Record Smashing.

In the return trip of the Wabash special, carrying from the Pan-American exposition, the officials of the Louisville Exposition Purchase Exposition Company, the distance from Buffalo to St. Louis, 715 miles, was covered in 14 hours and 13 minutes of running time, the average being over 50 miles an hour. From Decatur to Granite city, 105 miles, the run was made in 104 minutes. This includes stops. Not including stops the average rate of speed was over 66 miles an hour. At one point a speed of 79 miles an hour was made.

To Elect Callaway's Successor.

Notices have been sent to the directors of the New York Central railroad of a special meeting on Monday at the Grand Central station. It is expected that at this meeting a successor will be chosen to Samuel R. Callaway as president.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The International Association of Car Workers will hold its next convention in Chicago in October, 1902.

There is talk of the Baltimore & Ohio adding 1,000 cars to its present coke equipment. It is probable they will be of steel, but that is not yet settled.

It is reported that Nathan Guilford, traffic manager of the New York Central, would succeed the late J. F. Goddard as commissioner of the Trunk Line association.

Official notice has been given that E. W. Westlake has been appointed superintendent of the dining car service of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh, with headquarters at Chicago.

Considerable criticism is caused by the fact that the Central Passenger association has cut Chicago out from the benefit of the one cent per mile coach rate to the Pan-American. This rate is made applicable just a month and south line, which does not include this city.

No semi-annual cash prizes will be given to freight train crews on the Chicago & Alton as a matter of discipline, owing to the number of wrecks that have occurred the past year, the management hoping that this will make them more careful during the year beginning July 8.

The date for the meeting of the Pittsburgh rate clerks to check in the new rate sheet has been fixed at Monday next, after many delays. The plates of the old sheet were burned in the Stevenson-Foster fire. A large number of important rate changes will be made, it is said, at this meeting.

The Pennsylvania Company will shorten the running time of some of its trains between Pittsburgh and Chicago. A new train will be put on to make the run between Pittsburgh and Chicago each way in eight hours and thirty minutes. Train 15 will be run in two sections and the time made one hour and thirty minutes faster.

EXHIBITION BY NORTH SCHOOL.

Gymnastic Drills Encored Till Pupils Were Exhausted.

The friends of the scholars of the North school assembled in the school house Wednesday night to witness drills by the classes in physical culture. First there was a calisthenic drill by a class of boys and girls. Then club swinging by girls, to which there were two encores. This was followed by a flag drill and fancy steps by a class of girls. There were so many encores that the children stopped only when exhausted.

Mrs. Parker is principal of the North school, and is assisted by six regular and three special teachers. Prof. Hertel is in charge of the physical culture. The manual training department is in charge of Prof. Fitzgerald. His class of boys showed many specimens of their handiwork. About 600 scholars attend the North school.

TEXAS OIL WILL RUN STEAMERS ON LAKES

IT CAN BE SOLD IN COMPETITION WITH PITTSBURGH COAL.

The Guffey Petroleum Company Negotiating for Tank Steamers and Will Ship Its Product Via the Gulf, Atlantic and St. Lawrence Route to the Great Lakes—Pipe Line to Mississippi Already Completed.

That the crude oil of Texas will compete with the soft coal of Pittsburgh in the northwest, and particularly at lake points, seems to be almost a certainty. It is feasible, and in a few months will no doubt be a fact. The J. M. Guffey Petroleum Company is negotiating at Cleveland with one of the largest vessel owners on the lakes for the purchase of two whaleback boats, by which oil may be delivered at all lake points in competition with Pittsburgh coal.

The Cleveland firm in question owns a fleet of some 30 boats engaged in carrying grain and ore. Many of them are whalebacks of the latest and staunchest build. A few hundred dollars would convert them into tank steamers capable of transporting from 18,000 to 25,000 barrels of oil.

The J. M. Guffey Petroleum Company now has two pipe lines from its wells at Beaumont, Tex., to Port Arthur, 16 miles away, and up Sabine Pass, where there is always sufficient water for the largest steamers. The pipe lines are a six-inch and a ten-inch, and through them 20,000 barrels of oil can be delivered from the wells to a steamer in 24 hours.

The wells now flowing are producing over 100,000 barrels of oil a day. It is possible to load the tank steamers at Port Arthur with oil, send them around by the gulf, the Atlantic ocean, the St. Lawrence river and the Welland canal into the chain of great lakes, and deliver the oil in less than 30 days.

It is estimated that for fuel purposes three and one half barrels of oil are equal to a ton of the best Pittsburgh coal. On this basis the oil will come into competition with Pittsburgh coal at all lake points and contiguous territory where coal is worth over $2 50 a ton. The oil can be delivered at the lake points at little more than 80 cents a barrel. That it will be used by large consumers of fuel is a certainty. The cost of changing fire boxes under boilers so that oil can be burned is trifling when it is taken into consideration that it is a cleaner fuel, that it entirely dispenses with firemen and coal handlers, and that there are no ashes to remove.

The J. M. Guffey Petroleum Company has already loaded some tank steamers for the delivery of the oil at Mexican ports, and has several 4,000-barrel barges for delivery of the oil to planters in Louisiana. The company is also considering the feasibility of a tank barge line for the Mississippi river. Barges could be delivered up the Mississippi river as far as St. Louis, and the oil placed in competition with Pittsburgh coal at all lower river points.

WOODWARD, O. T., May 30.—Parties digging a well at Moscow, 15 miles southwest of here, yesterday struck a vein of oil, which soon developed into a gusher. The oil forced itself to the brink of the well and covered an acre of ground before the flow could be checked. Moscow is on the Canadian river.

POINTS OF COMPASS TO GO

Numbers Are to Be Used Instead of North, South, East and West.

The mariner's compass will soon have a new face, if the government experts have their way, and numbers, or degrees, will be used instead of letters to indicate directions. The change has been fought hard by navigators and sailors, who suspect that to call "Thirty-three-and-three-quarters" instead of the old "nor'east by north" might bring disaster. The first step toward the new dial was in the nature of a compromise. Four series of numbers, each running from 1 to 90, were printed on the face of the compass, but the old designations of north, east, south and west were retained. Thus the numbers could be used only by naming the part of the compass they referred to. The numbers now proposed will run from 1 to 360, doing away with the confusing calls of the present system.

Prof. F. L. O. Wadsworth of the Allegheny observatory believes the new system will be "as much of an improvement over the old as would be the substitution of the metric system for the English system of weights and measures. Surveyors and astronomers have used the degrees for a long time, and mariners use them on the sextant. The only possible objection to their use is one of custom, and this will soon be overcome."

"BURGLAR" HELD THE FORT.

The Owner of the House With a Besieging Party Was Out in the Street.

This morning Dickson street in Homestead was excited over the presence of a burglar who was seen about the house of Timothy Cotter and had disappeared into the house. Mr. Cotter had heard a man trying to get into his house and seized a revolver and started after him.

As Mr. Cotter stepped into the yard he saw the man disappear around the rear end of the house. Mr. Cotter opened fire and stirred up the neighborhood. When Lieut. George Serr of the Homestead police force arrived almost a dozen men were standing around the house, trying to agree on a plan to get the burglar.

The man had smashed the window in the rear of the house when Cotter opened fire on him and had leaped into the dark interior. Cotter was blocked, as the man was probably armed and his whereabouts not being known it was too great a risk to feel around in the dark for the burglar. The burglar held the fort and the head of the house was on the outside.

Lieut. Serr lighted his searchlight and went into the house, where he found William Ackerman lying in a drunken sleep on the floor of the kitchen. Ackerman was locked up in the police station and Burgess Miller fined him $10. He explained that he had mistaken the house for his own and when Cotter fired he thought a footpad was after him.

The Summer Sale of Oriental Rugs

The seasons have little effect on this Oriental Rug stock of ours—
Spring or fall—mid-winter, or mid-summer, it's always the same—Filled to overflowing with the choicest specimens of weaving that the Orient produces—
Our buyers in the Far East are constantly on the lookout for fine pieces—and every few days their purchases come to us—that's how it comes that there is always something new here—
And that's how it comes that now—just at the time when most dealers are putting their customers off with the plea that the "fall stock isn't here yet"—we can invite you to one of the finest displays of Oriental beauty you ever saw in Pittsburgh—

Some Price Inducements

We want to make a record in this Summer Sale—Hence we say: Special price inducements in all sizes of Oriental Rugs—We mention a couple just to give you an idea of the reduction range—

LADIES' G. A. R. HOME WILL BE DEDICATED

New Building Is Almost in Shape to Receive Its 37 Inmates.

The new home of the ladies of the G. A. R., at Hawkins station, will be dedicated to-morrow afternoon. The exercises begin at 2 o'clock and continue throughout the evening. Among the notables expected is Governor Stone.

Past Department Commander Sample and Charles F. McKenna will make addresses in the afternoon, and the building will be formally turned over to the board of managers. In the evening a musical program will be given. The chairman of the entertainment committee is Mrs. Martha E. Lucas.

Despite the energetic work of the building committee and contractors the new home is by no means complete, although far enough advanced to permit of the reception of inmates. Within a fortnight everything will be in shipshape.

The structure which replaces the one destroyed by fire in May of last year is picturesquely situated on the hill just above Hawkins station, is of brick, with a frontage of 150 feet, and was erected at a cost of $25,000. Of this amount $20,000 of indebtedness will be cancelled by the 114 circles in the state who have taken a generous interest in the new home. The building is equipped with all modern comforts and necessities. Forty-two bedrooms have been furnished.

The matron, Mrs. M. C. Euler, was busily engaged yesterday in putting matters in shape for the dedication. "We are rather torn up," she said, "but it is the best we can hope for and we know our visiting friends will be indulgent."

There are 37 inmates at the home. Not all of them are wives of Grand Army veterans, but all are the relicts of soldiers of the civil war.

Sunday, June 2d,

Two concerts at Kennywood Park by Duss' Peerless Band. Open-air stand. Inclement weather, large covered auditorium. No cancellations.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 30.—The Pirates had a hard struggle to break even to-day in their two holiday games with the Brooklyns. The batting of Wagner was the leading feature of the morning game, as he had four hits and a base on balls. Tannehill's pitching was also first class, and at the most critical moments he had excellent control. In the last inning, with a man on second, he struck Kelley out. There was nothing doing for the Pirates in the second contest. Leever was sadly out of form and the Pirates could not hit Donovan. That explains all.

For a change, Beaumont led off the dance, and got his base on balls. Clarke made the usual sacrifice and Wagner sent a hot grounder to left for two bases, scoring Beaumont. Bransfield missed three in succession. A fine single by Ritchey to right scored Hans, and Leach forced out Ritchey in the second inning the Pirates had a man on third and another on first and failed to score.

There was an exciting time in the second half of the second inning. After Dahlen was out, McCreery and Gatins each singled, and then Tannehill hit McGuire with a pitched ball, filling the bases. Yelling was tremendous, but a fine double play by Ritchey and Bransfield retired the side without a run. In the third inning Wagner beat out an infield hit, Bransfield sacrificed and Ritchey ripped out a two-bagger to left field, scoring Honus.

Beaumont Made a Blunder.

The champs got their first run in the third inning on a badly misjudged fly by Beaumont. Two men were out and Keeler was on first. Daly sent out a nice high fly to center and "Beau" allowed it to go over his head. Keeler got home and Daly got credit for a two-bagger. In the fourth inning both Clarke and Wagner got to first on balls. The former got to third on McGuire's bad throw. The runners tried to work the double steal, but Clarke was out at the plate.

After Zimmer had muffed an easy foul in the fifth Tanny made a bad throw to first of Hughes' grounder. Sheckard singled and Keeler bunted safely, filling the bases. Kelley sent an infield hit to Leach, who fumbled the ball, and Hughes scored. There should have been a double play. Daly struck out. Sheckard tallied on Dahlen's fly to Clarke, and the score was tied. McCreery struck out.

The Pirates had a fine chance to score in the seventh. Wagner and Bransfield were on bases and one man out. Ritchey forced Bransfield and Leach got a base on balls. Ely's pop fly spoiled things. In the eighth, with one man out, very stupid base running resulted in Zimmer and Beaumont being run down between the bases. Tannehill struck the last two men out in both the seventh and eighth innings.

Hans Turned the Winning Trick.

In the ninth, after Clarke was out, Wagner made his fourth hit and got to second on Bransfield's out. Ritchey got a first on Kelley's error and Wagner scored.

In the afternoon game Beaumont started off for the Pirates in great style. He made a beautiful bunt and got there. He stole second and was sacrificed to third by Clarke. Wagner's long fly to right scored "Beau."

The locals started out like demons. Leever sent Sheckard to first on balls and Keeler singled to left. Clarke's bad throw to third scored Sheckard and sent Keeler to third base. Kelley got his base on balls after a tremendous kick by Leever and O'Connor. Kelley was out trying to steal second and Keeler scored. Daly singled, stole second and scored on a single between first and second by McCreery. The Brooklyns made the gap wider in the fourth. Dahlen got his base on balls and McCreery whacked out to right center for three bases, scoring Dahlen. A long fly scored McCreery and the latter was loudly cheered.

In the fifth, after Ely was out, O'Connor singled and went to second on a passed ball. Leever struck out, and Beaumont made an infield hit. The double steal was worked and O'Connor scored. Beaumont tried for third, but was out.

McCreery Played Like a Winner.

Sheckard started with a triple to center for the locals in the fifth. Keeler was hit by a pitched ball. Kelley singled, scoring Sheckard, and Keeler was on third. Daly's fly scored Keeler and Kelley got to second. McCreery made another sensational catch of a fly in the sixth. A two-bagger by Gatins, a single by McGuire and Donovan's out scored one for Brooklyn in the sixth. Chesbro took Leever's place on the rubber in the seventh and pitched fine ball, the champions failing to score on him. The score:

MORNING GAME.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—The morning game between Philadelphia and Cincinnati was a battle royal between Pitchers Newton and Duggleby, the latter having a shade the better of the argument. Many fine plays were made in the field, despite the slippery condition of the grounds, caused by yesterday's rain. Attendance, 4,877. Score:

Dinner at the Golf Club.

Memorial day is rarely ever the occasion of any elaborate social events, and yesterday was no exception to the custom of spending the day quietly at home. Few people were out of town, and family parties surrounded the luncheon and dinner table. In the morning and afternoon many drove to the Allegheny Country club and to the Pittsburgh Golf club, where the links were dotted with golfers and several interesting events took place.

Last evening Mrs. James B. Laughlin of Wallingford and Pidwell streets, Shadyside, entertained at the Pittsburgh Golf club in honor of Miss Elsie Shaw, whose wedding to Mrs. Ledlie W. Young, a brother of Mrs. Laughlin, takes place next week. Dinner was served at 7:30 in the dining rooms of the clubhouse, covers being laid for 20. The decorations were entirely of pink and green. Mounds of pink roses and maidenhair ferns composed the central decorations, while the tables were lighted by candles covered with dainty pink shades. At the conclusion of the dinner the mounds of flowers fell apart disclosing bouquets of roses for the ladies. The party included Mr. and Mrs. James B. Laughlin, Miss Shaw and Mr. Ledlie W. Young, Miss Elizabeth Chambers, Miss Mary Laughlin, Miss Madelaine Laughlin, Miss Rebecca Darlington, Miss Susie Dilworth, Miss Mary Oliver, Miss Eda Young, Miss Virginia Bingham, Miss Conrad Cooper Jones, Mr. Alan D. Wood, Mr. William R. Scaife, Mr. William Robinson, Mr. Harry McCandless, Mr. Nelson E. Young, Dr. Thomas Arbuthnot and Dr. Alexander Blair.

When Cherries Are Ripe.

GRANDMOTHER'S CHERRY PIE—Has culinary skill created anything more delectable to our minds than the memory of grandmother's pie? Even the cherry pie of our mother makes pales in comparison. This favorite fruit may be treated in a variety of ways. Every year we learn something new about this good little fruit, and the many methods from soups to desserts would fill quite a volume. Cherry soup is comparatively new, and is surprisingly delicious when a few spoonfuls of tapioca being substituted for soup stock in giving it body. A cherry shortcake will bear more than favorable comparison with the much-lauded strawberry creation. Cherry salad and sandwiches are also rather new, and very nice.

CHERRY ROLY POLY—Remove the fiber and skin from five ounces of fine beef suet, chop it very fine and add to it half a pound of sifted flour and half a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well. Moisten with sufficient cold water to make it hold well together. Roll out on a well-floured board about an inch in thickness. Cover well with pitted cherries, sprinkle with sugar and roll up like jelly roll. Wrap it in a well-floured cloth, leaving room for it to swell. Place in a kettle of boiling water and boil two hours or steam for three hours and a half. Serve as soon as done with foamy sauce of sweetened cream. Bread dough that is light enough to bake may be used in the same manner.

CHERRY SHORTCAKE—Mix and sift twice, two cups of flour, quarter of a cup of sugar, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of nutmeg. Rub in a third of a cup of butter, add a beaten egg to two-thirds of a cup of milk and moisten the flour. Make the dough soft as biscuit dough. Do not knead the dough, but toss lightly on a floured bread board, roll out and place in a square baking tin, having the dough about an inch thick. Bake for 25 or 30 minutes in a hot oven. When done, split open carefully, spread with softened butter, then cover one-half with pitted sugared cherries. Put on the top layer; cover with more cherries; sprinkle with sugar and pile whipped cream on top of cherries, or serve with plain cream. The cherries must be very ripe for this cake.

CHERRY TAPIOCA—Soak four tablespoonfuls of tapioca in a pint of cold water until the water is absorbed. Take a pint of stoned cherries; add the juice to the fruit, stir until the sugar is dissolved and let the syrup come to a boil. Drop in carefully one quart of California white cherries, pitted; simmer gently for 15 minutes; strain carefully and when the syrup is cold add a quart of cream and freeze. When the dasher begins to turn hard take it out, beat the cream well with a paddle and stir in the fruit. Repack freezer in ice and salt and let it stand three or four hours with a blanket or piece of carpet thrown over it.

CHERRIES AND CREAM—Stone and cook white cherries in just enough syrup to cover them; when done drain off the juice and stand both away to get cold. Have ready a pint of vanilla ice cream. Put a tablespoonful of the cherries in the bottom of a small glass dish. Cover with the cream, heaping it in the center; then pour a little of the syrup over the cream, place a cherry on top and serve.

CHERRY CUSTARD—This is a deep, open cherry pie with a thick custard poured over the cherries after pie is baked and cold. This custard covered with a meringue and browned slightly in the oven.

CHERRY SOUFFLE—Moisten two tablespoonfuls of flour with a little cold milk and stir it into a pint of scalded milk. Cook in double boiler until it thickens. Then remove and cool. Beat the yolks of four eggs light; add two tablespoonfuls of butter, softened but not oily, a pinch of ground cinnamon and a dash of nutmeg. Add these to the milk. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and add to the mixture, then one pint of pitted, drained cherries and a gill of thick cream. Flavor with vanilla, kirsch or maraschino. Turn into a souffle tin and bake in a quick oven.

CHERRY SALAD—Stone half a pound of cherries and save all the juice. Select and wash a nice head of lettuce, using only the whitest leaves; slice a small cucumber; chop fine a dozen blanched almonds. Mix all together and pour over the salad a dressing made of a gill of cherry, four tablespoonsful of sugar, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and one of maraschino.

VARIED HOST OF WOMEN WORKERS

They Fill All Sorts of Positions at the Pan-American Exposition.

A SQUAW 120 YEARS OLD CENTER OF ATTRACTION

She and Her Century Old Cabin Were Brought from the Tonawanda Reservation—Women Artists, Engravers, Demonstrators,

From a Staff Correspondent.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 30.—Every woman's organization in the city that has an employment department, every bureau that finds positions for people, the women's board of managers of the exposition, all the hotels and hundreds of other establishments are getting scores of letters every day from women all over the country. The one thing desired by all is a position of some sort that will cover their living expenses while the summer lasts. They come from teachers, clerks, stenographers, dressmakers, milliners and workers in many other lines. They are willing to do almost any kind of work and some will take the smallest kind of salaries. Most of these letters remain unanswered, for the field is already full of people who have come on to look up jobs for themselves.

The multitude of women employed in the exposition grounds is a surprise to most visitors. A woman designer has been busy for a week or two attending to the decorating and arranging of two pretty booths in the Manufacturers' and Liberal Arts building, and few pass the place without stopping to comment on its beauty, while the manager of that particular exhibit mentally pats himself on the back for the good sense he displayed in employing that woman's artistic fingers to fix things. A girl engraver from far away Kansas is working for a souvenir establishment, putting exposition buildings and things of that sort on spoons, trays and other articles. An important exhibit over which a woman has charge is an educational display that has a large space in the Liberal Arts building allotted to it, and was exhibited in the big fair in Paris last summer.

In the Emergency Hospital.

A most important place where women are kept busy is the emergency hospital on the grounds that the Pan-American managers have provided to take care of sick or injured people. A number of white-capped and aproned nurses move about the wards under the direction of a staff of doctors. Already many hundreds of patients have been carried over the threshold, if they are not able to go to their homes or stopping places when night comes they are sent to one of the city hospitals, for the exposition hospital is a daytime one only. Five workmen have died there since the building of the exposition began. Two were killed by electricity and three from falling.

Another place where many women are employed as nurses is in the children's building, where little ones are taken care of while their parents or guardians go sightseeing.

Indian Lace Work.

Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Miss Townsend and a lot of other prominent women some time ago formed themselves into a committee and took space in one of the buildings for a display of lace work done by the Indian women of Minnesota. It is not yet in place, because of some delay in the finishing of the space. The Porto Rico women have a handsome exhibit of a multitude of different articles that one might spend some days looking over and still not see all there is to be seen. There has been great demand for small spaces for these women's exhibits. A feminine rug maker who keeps a lot of New England maids and matrons busy with her work will have a goodly showing of wares. A Chicago woman who makes artistic settings for jewels has taken space for a display well worth inspection, and another woman shows a beautiful array of pottery as her handiwork.

Besides these women who are at the head of some display, there are crowds of others filling minor positions. There are more of them on the Midway than in any other place, unless it be the Manufacturers and Liberal Arts building be an exception.

Many Positions Held by Women.

It is said that there are over 460 women employed on the Midway. There are some feminine ticket sellers who, according to rumor get salaries ranging from $4 to $10 a week. The Moorish cafe has maidens of that land in native costume for waitresses. The dainty Japanese women are to be seen here and there in booths and tea houses. There are women performers in the different shows. Then there are girls who sell all sorts of trinkets and girls who dispense soft drinks. Some are veterans at their business and do a thriving trade, while others are too timid yet to push their wares with the vim that comes with experience.

Demonstrators of many kinds are scattered through the buildings, some bake bread, pies, cakes and other things, while a large number make tea, coffee, chocolate and similar drinks. Two young women have charge of a model Dutch kitchen in the Manufacturers building, where they cook, analyze flour and discuss kitchen work and a lot of other things in the most intelligent manner. They have sole charge of the costly exhibit and are the representatives of one of the big firms of the country.

A 120-Year-Old Squaw.

Probably among all the 2,500 women who are helping to make the Pan-American interesting the one who will get the most attention from visitors is an old Indian woman from the Tonawanda reservation. She is 120 years old and her century old cabin has been brought from the reservation and put in the Six Nations' village, which is located a very few rods away from the Fine Arts building. Just as soon as the tardy warm days get here the owner of the cabin will come to take up her residence at the exposition for all summer. She will be visited by almost every exposition guest, for there are few who do not pass through the village. The settlement is there as a sort of educational feature, there being no admission price into its precincts. Since last October the Indians have been there building their cabins and stockades ready for the exposition. They are under the leadership of Capt. Lawton, a white man, who, because of a favor he did the tribe many years ago, was adopted into it as a brother of the chief. About the first exclamation made by every feminine visitor who sets foot in the cabins is, "How clean they are!"

Presenting the Flag.

The flag that will be presented to the Dolly Madison chapter, Daughters of 1812, this afternoon, is a beautiful large silk banner with soft gray ground and edged with blue fringe. In the center of the banner appear in blue the insignia of the society, the star and anchor, the emblems of the army and navy. The flag is nearly 10 feet in length.

Mrs. Lewis W. Hall before her death had wished to present the flag of the society to the Pittsburgh chapter, and it is in accordance with her wishes that the flag will be presented this afternoon by Miss Hall and Mr. Hall, in memory of their mother, the first president of the society. The colors of the flag, gray and blue, symbolize both the army and the navy, in the war of 1812, the insignia of the society, star and anchor, showing this union.

The flag was received by Mrs. Sullivan Johnson, the former regent of the Dolly Madison chapter, and now president of the Pennsylvania society, after the meeting of the state society in this city last week. The presentation will be made at 5 o'clock this afternoon by Mrs. Johnson in the name of the donors, the son and daughter of Mrs. Lewis Hall. Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, as regent of the chapter, will receive the flag. The presentation will be followed by an informal tea. The ladies who include the members of the Dolly Madison chapter and of the Women's Press club.

Help for Women

Who Are Always Tired.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women.

They had been fighting at various places and wound up at Thirtieth and Smallman streets. Hughes was captured by Officer George Cole. Kupski was sweeping the tracks of the Monongahela Traction Company at Wood street and Penn avenue, and made more dust than the merchants thought necessary. Ewing asked him to sweep more carefully, and Kupski answered with his broomstick. Horner attacked Kupski and broke a heavy cane over his head. The traction company gave $150 bail for Kupscki.

Wrongly Arrested—John McKain, a prominent South Side citizen, was unjustifiably arrested yesterday during the memorial services at the South Side cemetery. He was one of the leaders in the exercises, and was dumbfounded when a man stepped up to him and accused him of being a fraud. Before he had time to realize it he was brought before Magistrate McGarey by Capt. Gallant and Officer Sullivan. The magistrate discharged McKain at once without considering the charge. The man who caused the arrest afterward admitted he was wrong.

Conductor's Skull Fractured—John McDonald of Braddock, a conductor on the Monongahela Traction line, was injured at Duquesne yesterday afternoon, probably fatally. While standing on the running board of an open car warning passengers to keep in the clearing of the poles his head struck a trolley pole with such force as to knock him from the car. He was picked up unconscious and removed to Dr. L. H. Botkins' office and later to Mercy hospital. His skull was fractured and head and face badly lacerated. Charles Howe of McKeesport, a passenger, was struck by McDonald's body and also knocked from the car. He escaped with a slight scalp wound.

Lineman's Narrow Escape—Anthony Needham, a lineman of the Central District Printing and Telegraph Company, had a narrow escape from death while stringing a wire at Duquesne yesterday. His hand came in contact with a live wire and he received a terrible shock. His fellow workmen below the pole heard him utter a groan and fall. His body luckily caught in the network of wires and hung in that position until rescued. Needham was taken to his home in Duquesne, and the physicians think he will recover. His hands and body were terribly burned. The accident occurred at the corner of Duquesne and Grant avenues, the principal streets of the town, and broke up the memorial parade on its way to the cemetery.

THE DAILY SHORT STORY.

The General's Musket

By Giselle D'Unger.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

I wonder why I am left all alone in this dingy corner. I know I am rusty and worm-eaten and unfit for use, yet I do believe there is a little life in that trigger yet. A good many years have passed since my brave young master grasped me in his warm hand and started for the drill hall where other young men stood in a straight line and carried arms and shouldered arms and diligently went through the manual of tactics. It was not long before the summers came and the boys marched out in their beautiful new uniforms to the music of the village band.

How they cheered us as we went marching down to fight and the air was full of fluttering handkerchiefs, damp with tears, but dried in the soft, warm wind of that May morning. The trees were full of pink and white blossoms and the sweet, warm earth sent its fragrance like a benediction on this little company, whose hearts grew faint as they thought of unknown terrors, but whose eyes and lips looked and whispered brave words of love, duty, patriotism.

In the midst of the waiting throng at the station was Miss Nannie Crawford, who stood like the great white statue that guards the tomb of her mother. She had waited evidently some time in the motley throng, but she appeared quiet and nerveless, although a slight twitching of the eyes and lips showed deep emotion.

On came the sons of Father Abraham to swell the vast army to vaster proportions, swinging along in even step, with the rhythm of the band, led by gallant Col. Dillingham. As they neared this point, mothers, sisters and friends pressed forward to thrust flowers, packages, letters and lunch boxes, little last tokens of their love and affection. The bright glitter of the officer's swords flashed in the sun, but the soldier' muskets made as brave a showing.

Heavily the lines advanced and passed Nancy, who clutched at her breast as if to stifle the moans she knew she must not utter until my young master swung into line before her.

Thrusting a tiny packet toward him, she replied:

"God bless you, Ned! I will pray for you every hour!"

Through God's mercy, the order to halt was then given as those in front crowded into the waiting cars. Muskets were at rest and a grand onslaught was made by friends and relatives for one more farewell.

"Nan, darling Nan. It is your picture—so like you and so beautiful. It shall be my talisman!"

"No, no, Ned! Remember your God and read your mother's Bible."

"Dear mother! You are right!" and he pulled out the worn Testament and kissed it reverently.

"Ned! It is so hard!" and Nannie flung her arms about the young soldier's neck and wept bitterly.

"Nan! In God's name, be brave! I need all my strength now. We are orphans and the God of the Fatherless will watch over me. Be brave, darling! Be brave!"

A tear fell on me and I don't think my aim would have been a good one at that minute. Miss Nannie lifted her beautiful head and replied:

"You are right, dear! We will not be forgotten. I would not make a very brave wife for a soldier, but remember this, send for me if ever I am needed."

"That I will, dearest. God bless you! The order to march is being given—now goodby, and write often. Tell me all the news and if Tom Meredith is among you—well, no use to spoil our goodby, but let me know. Goodby! One last embrace!"

Promptly the order came and my master shouldered me and marched to the train. In a few hours were were at our destination and then knew what war meant.

One night my master was alone in his tent and he talked aloud to himself and re-read one of the numerous letters that came almost daily.

"Tom Meredith has enlisted and I hear he will be in Virginia—his post has been assigned him—he wears a uniform, but he doesn't compare with my Ned." So! Meredith was unsuccessful—he has learned that his wealth cannot buy love. I must be wary of him—he is a dangerous boy, and wouldn't hesitate to commit any deed through jealousy."

My young master was visibly disturbed.

A few days later, sure enough, here came Mr. Meredith, whom I remembered as handling me quite contemptuously when he called on my master in Aurora. He looked very handsome in his regimentals, but his eyes were cruel and hard under his gold-laced cap.

An engagement, fierce and hot, took place as the sun fell on that long, hot day in July, and it resulted in a more serious attack in the morning. The slain and wounded were left on the field as one gallant regiment moved forward and my dear master was one of the wounded. With me clasped in his hand he murmured in his delirium "Nannie! Nannie!"

In the confusion incident to a battle, Lieut. Meredith had managed to slip back and hurriedly glanced on the poor fellows who were lately so full of life and action. At last he saw my master. Such a look of hatred as came over his face may I never again see.

"Ah! there you are! Die! you villain, and then your pretty Nan will be more likely to come to my terms!" With these words he plunged a knife into the flesh of my master. How I cursed myself for my inanimate condition! Flinging the knife from him he stole among the dead like the coward he was.

My master was dead, I knew, as he became quiet after that one shriek of agony.

When the ambulance corps came his body was taken to the dead house, but some signs of life were observable and he was removed to the hospital.

"Where's my faithful gun—it has my name on it on a silver plate?" he feebly inquired.

I was brought and laid beside him, and he seemed contented and fell asleep.

On awakening he met the pretty limpid eyes of Miss Nannie, who had been sent for, as instructions were found on his person. The knife thrust was not fatal, as it had been diverted by the miniature of my sweet young mistress.

Yes, she became my mistress after the war and my brave young master rose to be a general in the army. Lieut. Meredith met his death and confessed all before the fatal moment.

Each Decoration day the general and his wife take a carriage down to the general's post and from there a mass of blossoms and vines are taken to the cemetery, where the body of that traitor lies. Ah! here comes the general, and he takes me up in his firm, strong hands. His hair is growing white and his voice is not so strong as in those days when he bade Miss Nan to be brave.

"Nannie, dearest, here is my old gun! Faithful friend!"

He turns me from side to side, as he says:

"Nan, if this old friend could speak it would tell a romantic history. That scamp—don't look so, darling. I forgive him—but a bit of righteous indignation overcomes me when I think of him stealing over me and trying to finish me. He met his fate as all such natures do, and—but I forgive him. To prove to you that I am as progressive as the world, I will order the biggest emblem I can for his grave to-morrow, and you must place it."

"What a dear, good husband! I always felt sorry for the miserable creature, and I suppose it is because I am a woman and they are more forgiving when a former lover comes to a sad end. What emblem will you choose?" asked my mistress.

"I think a fitting one will be a heart-shaped design like this precious miniature. Time softens all hearts, and to-morrow will be a day when animosity should be laid aside. This dear face," and the general looked upon the lovely face of Miss Nan as when in the '60's she tripped down to the station and gave him the talisman that had preserved his life, "this dear face, darling, has been my inspiration and my salvation. Meredith was not to blame for loving you, but the means he took to secure you were reprehensible. It is a curious thing that I should find old 'trusty' on this day of all days. I have neglected the old piece and we will do so no more. Have his barrel brightened and put him in my den, dear, to-morrow, although I've half a mind to have him in the procession. Gad! I will turn him over to Comrade Jenks and he will be proud to carry his general's first musket."

So, on the great Decoration Day I was taken through the streets and out to the cemetery, where the comrades laid in their dreamless sleep. On a tiny mound, sweet Mistress Nan placed the heart-shaped wreath of violets and no one but she, the general and I understood why the poor creature, whose miserable life was a lesson to all, the brave, beautiful wife of the commander singled out that particular grave for so signal an honor.

THE QUESTION BOX.

Our Naval Guns.

How many times are 12 and 13-inch guns on United States warships fired before they are worn out?—2. What becomes of them afterward? 2. Is the government ordering 15-inch guns now?—McKee.

They last so well that their life can hardly be stated, though it is known that they are good for several hundred rounds more than it was thought, at the time they were authorized, that they would stand. 2. In the end they will be sold to the junkmen to be broken up. 3. The Wisconsin, whose keel was laid in 1899, is to have four of them, but they are not in such favor as they used to be, the general tendency in new vessels being to replace the largest cannon with smaller ones.

Cremona Violins.

In what way is a Cremona violin distinguished from other violins?—Irwin.

Cremona is an Italian city especially celebrated for the violins of the Amatis, who date from 1550 to 1620, and of the Guarneris and the Stradivari, 1670 to 1728. All these were distinguished from other makes by fineness of workmanship and excellence of tone, and each bore the name of its maker and usually the date of manufacture. All, particularly the last, have been much counterfeited, so nowadays it takes an expert to test the genuineness of an instrument that bears these stamps.

Up to the Average.

The contention is made that musical people are not, as a rule, solidly educated—that they lack broad culture. Is this true?—Eager.

No; occasional "stars" of operatic fame are specialists to the extent of disregarding the rudiments of other branches, over-weening vanity, perhaps, creating contempt for all matters except those on which the individual's fame rests. We know of no biographical matter about the vocalists you name that discloses such defects. That doesn't prove anything, however, as their biographers are their admirers.

About Bronze.

What are the ingredients of bronze? 2. Is the metal malleable?—M. M., B.

Copper and tin usually, and aluminum or manganese replaces the tin for some sorts. The proportion of copper ranges from two-thirds to eleven-twelfths, according to the sort of bronze. 2. It is malleable, though not to such a degree as is copper, and, curiously, to be made malleable must be heated red hot and quenched in water, a process that makes steel brittle.

Anthony Hope.

Will you tell me something about the novelist, Anthony Hope?—A. S.

He is Anthony Hope Hawkins, second son of a London clergyman, was born February 9, 1863, and is unmarried. He was educated at Marlborough and at Balliol college, Oxford, and became a barrister of the Middle Temple in 1887, practicing until 1894, when he gave up law for literary work. Beginning in 1890, his publications have been numerous.

To Remove Printing Ink.

Will you give a formula, if there is any, for removing printing ink from paper?—J. E. H.

Here is the formula, but it won't work every time, nor will anything else, but thick blotting paper beneath the soiled sheet, apply sulphuric ether with cotton wool, rubbing gently, and finally apply fresh blotting paper to absorb the color. Many repetitions of these processes will be necessary.

Original Maple Sugar Maker.

Who discovered that sugar could be made from maple sap, and when and where?—U. M. M.

Some North American Indian. In the early days of our colonies some of the savages made a festivity of sugar gathering.

Meaning of Words.

What are the origin and meaning of the word Kismet? 2. Also the origin of the word oleomargarine?

It comes from a Turkish word "qismet," and means fate or appointed lot. 2. It is compounded of oleo, from the Latin oleum, oil and margarin, the name given to the solid fatty matter of vegetable oils and to a pearl-like substance extracted from lard.

About Authors.

What has become of the Mr. Clark who wrote under the name of Max Adeler? 2. Is William Henry Bishop, the author, living?—H. S. H.

This is Charles Heber Clark, who is living in Philadelphia, we think. 2. Yes; in New Haven, Conn.

Data About Greece.

With what countries has Greece been at war? 2. Which is of the most recent date, and who was ruler at the time? 3. Had he a son? If so, what was his name?—T. A.

In modern times Turkey has been her chief opponent, the last war occurring in 1897. George I. then was king of Greece. His sons were five, Prince Constantine the eldest.

Amateurs of All Kinds Were Kept Busy

THE P. A. C. TEAM TWICE BEATEN

Lack of Practice Told on the Ex-Champions from the East End.

TIMELY BATTING RALLIES BY HOMESTEAD

Had a Streak in Each Game and Saved a Shutout—Killen and Gumbert Pitched Good Ball—Big Crowd Out to See the Games.

H. L. A. C. defeated P. A. C. twice yesterday, although the latter showed up surprisingly strong for a team that was together for the first time this season, and kept the champions busy. Gumbert pitched for P. A. C. in the morning, and the home team could do nothing with him until the seventh inning, when he weakened and was hit for seven hits, netting six runs and winning the game. Coleman pitched for Homestead and was invincible in all but one inning, when three hits netted two runs, the final score being 2 to 3.

The afternoon game was witnessed by the largest crowd that ever assembled at a ball game in Homestead, there being over 2,500 paid admissions. The football seats in right field had to be put in use to accommodate the crowd. Killen pitched for P. A. C., and for the first five innings not a hit was made off him and not a man reached first base, but in the sixth two singles were made off him, but no runs were scored.

In the seventh Hinton led off with a two-base hit and scored on Marshall's single, and in the eighth, like in the morning game, the H. L. A. C. took a batting streak, Miles leading off with a two-base hit and McCluskey, Guassant and Mangen making singles in succession, scoring three runs. Both teams put up a nice game in the field, and the home team's batting really was the only thing that saved it from a shut out. The P. A. C. have a strong team, and with practice should be able to defeat any amateur team in Western Pennsylvania.

H. L. A. C. will play Westminster college at Steel Works park Saturday. Score of afternoon game:

GAVEN LOST THE GAME.

The College Pitcher Went in the Air and Was Touched Up.

CHARLEROI, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—Gaven's wildness in the second inning lost today's game for Pittsburgh college. In that round he gave two bases on balls, hit a batsman and was touched up for a couple of singles, which gave Charleroi enough runs to win. The contest was close and exciting throughout, the clubs being very evenly matched. Gaven's pitching and hitting were features, striking out 14 men and securing three hits, one double. Parkins' pitching was also good. He kept the lingies scattered and in but one instance did Charleroi get more than one. The holding of Huckestein, Perkins and Eckel was of the gilt-edge order. The crowd was the largest that has attended a ball game in Charleroi for years. Score:

PLAYED GREAT GAMES.

Millvale and Our Boys Each Got a Game.

Two very fast and exciting games of baseball were played yesterday between the Our Boys of Etna and the Millvale A. C. baseball teams, the honors being even, as the Millvales won the morning game on their own grounds at Millvale and the Our Boys won at Etna in the afternoon. The Our Boys had the morning game won up until the seventh inning, when the home team scored four runs, giving them a lead of one run. They scored three more in the eighth, making the final score 9 to 5. Blakely pitched a nice game for the Our Boys and was poorly supported. Williams pitched a fine game for the Millvales and had excellent support. Daley, at first, and Orbin of the U. of P., played a strong game at second. Jahn, at third, for the Our Boys, was one of the bright features of the game, having accepted eight chances without an error. The scores:

ANOTHER EVEN BREAK.

Wash.-Jeff. and West Virginia Split Their Games.

MORGANTOWN, W. VA., May 30.—(Special.)—Washington and Jefferson and West Virginia university here at baseball in an interesting double header played before a tremendous crowd this afternoon. The first, a ten-inning game, was a pitchers' battle, between Kenna and Lambertson, Kenna allowed but two hits and struck out 14 men, but errors of Crossland let in two runs for Washington and Jefferson, which won the game, as the West Virginia boys could score but once. Bowman pitched the second game for the West Virginia university and shut out the Washington and Jefferson boys. Moore pitched seven innings for Washington and Jefferson, and seven runs were made by West Virginia. Geisler finished the game and no more runs were made. The fine fielding of Lambertson, Kenna and Bowman and the fine work at short by both Oyler and Thornton were the features of the game.

Franklins Won One and Lost One.

In the first game with the W. E. A. C. of Braddock the J. C. Lodin's Franklin A. C. played a good game, but could only play six innings, as a result of a dispute which the umpire refused to decide. The Franklins then left the field, thus putting the score back to the fifth inning. In the second game at McKeesport with the Athletic club of that place they were beaten in a well-played game, losing by the narrow margin of one run. The score in full:

YALE'S RIDERS HAD ALMOST A WALKOVER

THE INTERCOLLEGIATE BICYCLE CHAMPIONSHIPS HELD

Three Events Were Held Over from Last Saturday and Were Eagerly Watched for—Old Eli's Pedal Pushers Showed Great Speed and Finished First in the Majority of the Events—Princeton Took Second.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The intercollegiate bicycle championships, twice postponed, were held at Berkeley oval this afternoon. Yale captured the championship, as was generally expected, scoring 30 points, Princeton 17, Pennsylvania 7 and Columbia 1. After the meet O. S. Butts was elected captain of the Yale team for 1902. All the finishes were close and the track was good. The finish in the quarter-mile, when inches separated the first four, was so close that judges made the mistake of placing the third man first, but afterwards rectified the error.

Half mile—Won by E. W. Farley, Yale; G. V. W. Voorhees, Pennsylvania, second; S. W. McClave, Jr., Princeton, third; F. T. Mason, Yale, fourth. Time, 1:05 2-5. Won by a foot; half a length between second and third.

Mile—Won by S. W. McClave, Jr., Princeton; E. W. Farley, Yale, second; Bert Ripley, Princeton, third; R. C. Gentry, Yale, fourth. Time, 2:35 1-5. Won by half a length; same distance between second and third.

Quarter mile—Won by F. T. Mason, Yale; R. H. Gentry, Yale, second; E. Sid Butts, Yale, third; S. W. McClave, Jr., Princeton, fourth. Time, :32 1-5. Won by inches; same distance between second and third.

One-mile tandem—Won by E. W. Farley and J. H. Overall, Yale; G. V. W. Voorhees and C. N. Smith, Pennsylvania, second; R. H. Gentry and M. Moore, Yale, third; H. B. Barnth and A. C. Ohlon, Pennsylvania, fourth. Time, 2:03. Won by two yards; three yards between second and third.

Five miles—Won by Ripley, Princeton; R. H. Gentry, Yale, second; S. W. McClave, Jr., Princeton, third; C. R. Rose, Columbia, fourth. Time, 14:47. Won by half a length; same distance between second and third.

PRINCETON'S BAD DEFEAT.

Cornell Athletes Carried All Before Them—Sears Ran in Record Time.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 30.—The Cornell athletes administered a severe defeat to the Princeton team to-day. Out of 164 points the Ithacas took 64, this being by far the best showing ever made by Cornell in any branch of sports.

The track was heavy and the weather conditions very unfavorable for record-smashing, yet Sears, the freshman wonder, lowered the Cornell record in the 100-yard dash, the official time being 10 1-5. His work in this event was, according to some timers, faster than 10 flat, and it is thought that under favorable conditions he could have equaled the inter-collegiate record. He also carried off the quarter-mile event with ease in 52 4-5, and won the two-twenty yard dash by a good margain in 22 4-5. Gallagher unexpectedly won the two-mile event to Williams of Princeton.

In field events Princeton was expected to outpoint Cornell, yet the Ithacans here also made a creditable showing.

Each Took a Game.

Crafton A. C. played two hot games yesterday with the Turtle Creek A. C., one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. The sunshine brought a larger crowd than has been on the C. L. & A. A. grounds at Crafton for a long time. The morning game was a comedy of errors and misplays from the start on the part of both teams, while in the afternoon both teams put up good ball. The scores:

MORNING GAME.
Crafton	0	0	2	5	4	0	0	5	0—17
T. C. A. C.	1	0	0	0	4	1	0	7	1—14
AFTERNOON GAME.

Johnstown Won an Exciting Game.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—A score of workmen with the assistance of a warm sunshine this afternoon succeeded in converting the Westmont grounds from a mud puddle to a passably fair playing ground, and one of the most exciting games in the history of local baseball resulted in a victory for Johnstown in 11 innings. Both batteries did great work, Williams excelling after an absence from the pitcher's box of nearly four years, and winning his own game by a long drive for a home run. Owens played a nice game for Johnstown and batted well. Score:

The Iroquois A. C. lost its first game of the season yesterday morning to the crack E. W. Lehmann team of the South Side Y. M. C. A. park, by a score of 13 to 11. The features of the game were the pitching of Kuhn of the Lehmanns and the batting of that team.

The Fosters yesterday afternoon defeated the Fairview team by the overwhelming score of 19 to 2. The features of the game were the batting of Hughes for the Fosters, the remarkable pitching of E. Kalb for the Fosters and the splendid team work displayed by the Fosters.

Manor defeated the Arona team in one of the prettiest games played in many seasons by a score of 4 to 2. The features of the game were the hitting and base running by Cremer and the pitching of both twirlers. James struck out 18 men, and Miller was a close second with 17.

The Brushton A. C. defeated the Schafer A. C. by a score of 3 to 2 in the first of three games on Decoration Day. In the second game they defeated the same team by a score of 10 to 8, and in the third game obtained a decision over Lawrenceville, that team leaving the field with a score of 9 to 0.

The Mifflin Reserves went to Carnegie to play the Stars and A. Wagners, but the Wagners refused to play. The Mifflins claim the two games. The Mifflins played the St. Luke's Cadets and defeated them by the score of 21 to 7. The feature of the game was the pitching of Buster for the Mifflins.

CORNELL'S CREW WON THE RACE

It Was a Walkaway and the Course Record Lowered 34 Seconds.

COLUMBIA FINISHED A CLOSE SECOND

The Ithacans Had the Race from the Start and Pulled an Even Stroke, Which Was Clean Cut and Telling in Its Result.

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

ITHACA, N. Y., May 30.—The Cornell second 'varsity crew simply walked away from Columbia and Pennsylvania to-day on Cayuga lake, in as pretty a two-mile race as ever was rowed. The race was won in 10:32, lowering the record of the course made two years ago by 34 seconds, with hardly a change of stroke on Cornell's part and almost without a spurt. Columbia finished second, 11:02, more than two lengths behind. Pennsylvania was more than four lengths behind Cornell, in spite of a desperate attempt to spurt on entering the stretch.

The course was laid along the east shore, Columbia having the inside and Cornell the outside positions. At 6:10 the race started. Columbia broke water first and set up a 40-stroke pace; Pennsylvania, almost as soon, with 39 strokes and Cornell last with 37.

Before the first quarter was rowed, it was evident that the Quakers were slow. Cornell's 36-stroke was doing more for her long shell than Columbia's 40. At the half Cornell had the lead by half a length, and Pennsylvania had dropped still further back, though fighting hard with a 40-stroke. At the mile the positions were unchanged. Cornell was rowing like a great machine, without splashing and never a break in her 36-stroke pace. A half mile further Pennsylvania men gave up hope, with their shell two lengths behind. Cornell entered the stretch a clear length ahead of Columbia and increased her stroke to 38. Columbia made a strenuous spurt, rushing her slides and stroking 42. Pennsylvania was four lengths behind and failed to gain with the stroke forced to the limit. In the run to the limit line, Cornell gained a length on Columbia and the New Yorks spurting only resulted in increasing their lead over Pennsylvania.

The crew outweighed Columbia by three pounds average.

THE HARLEM REGATTA.

Many Oarsmen Were Protested. Dauntless Crew Once More Proves Its Prowess.

NEW YORK, May 30.—The 35th annual regatta of the Harlem Regatta association took place to-day on the Harlem river speedway course under very unfavorable conditions. In the early part of the day the weather was raw and threatening, but in the afternoon the damp lifted somewhat and some creditable contests marked the close of the program. The water was smooth and in good rowing condition, and quite spectators lined both sides of the river and encouraged the crews to the utmost. Some trial heats and a few of the finals were rowed up stream—that is, from Washington bridge to Sherman creek, in the forenoon—while in the afternoon the contests finished at Washington bridge.

Several protests were in order during the day. Herold Weekes, the strong man, rowing at No. 5 on the Junior eight, was protested on the ground that he was a senior. Three other members of the Columbia crew were also protested it being claimed that they had rowed on 'varsity eights quite recently. L. Tatum, an ex-Cornell man, rowing stroke on the Vesper double four, was protested for having rowed senior on the '97 Cornell crew. J. B. Atkin of the West Philadelphia Boat club was said to have rowed on the University of Pennsylvania 'varsity crew, and was objected to on the same grounds as Tatum. Neither Columbia, the West Philadelphia nor the Vespers won, consequently the protests were not acted upon beyond the formality of hearing.

The best race of the day was the final of the junior eight-oared shell, which was won by the New York A. C. Once again the famous Philadelphia Junior eight demonstrated that they have no equal on local waters. The wearers of the blue and white won the senior event from the Union Boat club by a lot to spare.

DIABETES.

Dr. J. Seegan, Professor of Medicine at the University of Vienna.

In his celebrated work on diabetes mellitus says: "Of all remedies in my large experience with this disease and the many experiments which I, as well as such prominent men as Angle, Fleckles, Hlawezek and others, have made, Carlsbad Sprudel Water deserves to be placed in the first rank.

"All of the above writers agree with me that the use of the Carlsbad Waters exerts a very beneficial influence in diabetes. I have, in the course of many years treated a very large number of patients suffering with the disease, and have, with great interest, noticed the effect of Carlsbad Water in reducing the amount of sugar. My invariable experience has been that almost without an exception an improvement was marked and noticeable during and after the use of the same, even where no strict diet was observed." B. F. JONES SEES BRIGHT FUTURE

Measures the World's Advance by the Consumption of Pig Iron.

NOT ALARMED AT THE RISE OF TRUSTS

Nor Does He Fear the Present Boom May Lead to Overproduction. Great Ironmaster Plunges Into the Philosophy of History.

The Hon. B. F. Jones of Pittsburgh, president of the American Iron & Steel association and active in Jones & Laughlins, limited, as a member of the advisory board, which position he took a year ago in retiring as president of the big partnership concern, is quoted in some detail in the current issue of the Iron Trade Review, on the industrial outlook. The interview, as presented, is as follows:

I am optimistic in my views of the future of the iron trade, because I find so many indications of a wonderful advance in the life of the people. The developments of the past few years have been marvelous. The world movements are so rapid that one can scarcely keep track of them. Our close contact with nations that we have long regarded as so remote that they would always be inaccessible is a thing of the greatest significance in its relation to our industrial progress in the years just ahead.

No More Dark Continent.

"It is only a few years ago—I was in Paris at the time—that Europe was welcoming Stanley back from 'darkest Africa.' Not so long ago, when a party of young Harvard college graduates went out on a hunting and exploring expedition to Africa we looked upon them as upon those we should never see again. It seemed that they were risking their lives in venturing into such a remote and savage country. But to-day there is nothing in a trip to Africa to excite the slightest comment. Representatives of American manufacturers are going and coming all the time, and we are regularly doing business with Africa. And there's China, which only a few years ago, with its 400,000,000 people, was unknown to us, and so with Japan and the Philippines and Hawaii, with all of which our trade relations are to be closer and closer.

But to me the most impressive factor in our modern life, and one that is very important in our material development, is that the individual man counts for so much more than he used to. The vast increase of our population is not so much of a wonder as the way in which the power of every unit of our population has been multiplied. The relation of this fact to iron consumption has been so well established that iron by common consent has become a sort of barometer of civilization and progress. While we have reached a per capita consumption of 600 pounds of pig iron in the United States, China's rate probably wouldn't reach 4 pounds, with all her millions.

Multiplication of Power.

As a familiar illustration of the way in which our industrial power has been multiplied, I recall that in the early days of my connection with the iron manufacture in the '40s, it took three men to handle a 150-pound iron in our forges. Now a single man—and he may wear kid gloves if he chooses—has only to pull a lever and a 20-ton mass of molten metal is lifted and carried wherever he wants it. And the mechanism of trade has increased in the same way. Our banking and currency and credit systems are inconceivably beyond those of the early days. I can sit in this office and transact in a day as much business in volume as all Pittsburgh did in a day when I was a young man.

The increase in individual producing and consuming capacity is due to a variety of causes that represent the increasing complexity of life in this country. A very important factor in all has been the perfecting of the means of transportation. We must not forget that the railroads have made a large contribution to the present conditions. For example, it costs no more to send a barrel of flour from St. Paul to Liverpool to-day than it once cost to send it from Washington county, Pa., to Pittsburgh.

Diffusion of Intelligence.

The general diffusion of intelligence to-day is a striking feature in our industrial development. The average degree of skill in the labor of to-day is much above the level of the last generation. Never before have wage-earners been readers as they are to-day. I cannot but contrast the intelligent faces of the men in our works to-day with the inert countenances of so large a proportion of the workers of the earlier years. The workingmen of to-day are reading and thinking.

Asked to speak concerning the future of industry in the United States, particularly of the iron industry, Mr. Jones said:

I look toward the future with great hopes. It is the habit of our men to dwell on the past, but I find pleasure in contemplating the greater future of the iron trade. Great as our progress has been, we are to make new records in the years before us. I do not look with alarm, as some people do, upon the formation of trusts. Self-interest will dictate a policy of conservatism. They must not put prices up, for that will inevitably cut off consumption. They should guarantee a steadiness in prices which will give the iron trade a more even pace and save it from the very wide fluctuations that have marked it for many years.

Future of Steel Trade.

"What as to the future of our export trade in steel?"

While just now there is quietness in the export trade, it will continue to be an important factor, as it had begun to be. The question of transportation is an important one in this connection. I believe in the ship subsidy as a means of rapidly building up our own ocean carrying trade. I look at it just in the light in which I view protection. It brings results speedily that otherwise if attained at all, would come only after long time. Protection has built up our population, so that to-day we have 76,000,000 of people, whereas without it we should probably have had by this time 15, 18 or 20 millions. We want to develop an ocean-carrying industry rapidly, so as to hold and increase our foreign trade in iron and steel.

"What of the course of the iron market in the immediate future?"

The indications for this year are excellent. The mills are full of business. Crop reports are favorable. Prices are not high and prospects are good for continued large consumption.

"Does it seem likely that the new capacity for iron and steel production now being built and the further extension for which plans have been made will soon bring us to the point of overproduction?"

I think not. It will be a year before any considerable addition will be made to our output from new works now building or planned, and the natural growth of our needs, I believe, will take care of the capacity now being provided.

Nestor of Iron Masters.

Mr. Jones has had over two score years of experience in iron and steel manufacture. He is generally regarded as a broad-minded man of affairs and during the Blaine-Cleveland presidential campaign was chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. Jones, at the reorganization of the Jones & Laughlins interests something over a year ago, gave way in the presidency to his son, B. F. Jones, Jr., but remained in active participation in the affairs of the partnership concern as chairman of the advisory board.

When less than a year ago Andrew Carnegie was striving for concessions from the railroads in the iron and steel freight rates from Pittsburgh, he called on Mr. Jones to exert his influence and it was shortly after that that the Pittsburgh manufacturers were granted the best railroad rates of a long period of years. Mr. Jones continues in active participation of the affairs of Jones & Laughlins, limited, and is watching the development of the concern, which is holding a place second only to that of the United States Steel Corporation in industrial affairs.

THE OIL FIELDS.

Southwest of the Sand Fork development in Lewis county, West Virginia, the South Penn Oil Company has just completed a well on the W. H. Dent farm that should have been in months ago, or when that pool was the most discussed of any in the country, and had it not been for a number of accidents, necessitating the moving of the rig twice, it would have done much to allay the fears of a deluge of oil soon after the great Copley gusher was drilled in. The location is one and a half miles southwest of the original Copley gusher and it was in this direction that an extension was looked for. At last it has been completed, drilled through all sands and is a duster.

In the Bealls Mills district, east of the Sand Fork pool, the same company has completed and shot its No. 10 on the T. R. Reynolds farm and has a 100-barrel producer in the fifth sand.

In the Wallace district, Harrison county, the Carter Oil Company has completed its test well on the Lot R. Parson farm and has a 75-barrel producer. In the same district the South Penn Oil Company has completed its No. 2 on the John J. Ashcroft farm and has a ten-barrel pumper. South of the Jarvisville development, in the same county, the South Penn has completed a test well on the G. T. Richards farm and has a very small producer.

In the Stout district, in Doddridge county, the Carter Oil Company has completed its No. 5 on the W. M. Stout farm and will have a light pumper. The location is 2,000 feet north of No. 2 on the same farm.

In the Burning Springs district, in Ritchie county, the Bridgewater Gas Company has drilled in its No. 5 on the Thomas Ash farm and will have a small pumper in the Cow Run sand.

In the same district the Expansion Oil Company has completed its No. 8 on the J. C. Hall farm and has a show for a 10-barrel pumper.

In the Meadville district, Tyler county, the Carter Oil Company has completed No. 6 on the C. Smith farm and has a light well in the Big Injun sand. The Rock run the same company's No. 2 on the M. & B. Robinson farm has been drilled through the sand and is dry. No. 4 J. J. Correll, owned by the same company, has been completed and is good for 60 barrels a day.

Southeastern Ohio.

In the shallow sand territory in the Chester Hill development, on the Ohio side, in Morgan county, Hance & Wilson have completed their test well on the Samuel Grimes farm and have a show for a 10-barrel pumper. The Cumberland Oil Company's No. 7 on the Henry Wagoner farm will make a small well.

In the Payne district, Washington county, the Crown Oil Company has completed its No. 19 on the John Berg farm and will have an eight or ten-barrel pumper.

In the northeast extension of the Scio field, in Harrison county, Brenneman & Co. have drilled in their No. 7 on the Hannah Kentner farm and have a show for a 100-barrel producer. The location is 600 feet north of No. 3, which is still producing 60 barrels a day.

In the Taylorstown district, Washington county, the Forest Oil Company's No. 2 on the G. C. Horne farm is holding up at 280 barrels a day.

In the Mars district, Butler county, Tasker & Co.'s test well on the Davidson farm is still flowing at the rate of 50 barrels a day from the 100-foot sand. Turner & Co.'s old well at Reibold station, Butler county, shot and cleaned out a few days ago when it started its production at the rate of 100 barrels a day, has declined to ten barrels.

MORE NEW BUILDINGS.

Large Structures Being Projected and Important Realty Deals Under Way.

Of course, there was little doing in real estate yesterday, holiday quiet reigning at the brokers' offices. Several transactions of considerable size are approaching completion, which might have been consummated if there had been any business yesterday. The day was utilized by some owners of suburban plans to take investors over the properties plotted for sale, and some transfers of lots will follow as a result. Warrant properties are having active sale just now, every day bringing about transactions of this kind. The opening of new plans is of great frequency, and in most instances is attended with successful results.

The prospects are for a continuance of the present building boom. Brick manufacturers are very stiff in their prices, and report outputs of certain kinds sold up. In the different sections of the cities and suburbs many new dwellings are under way or projected, and new apartment houses are coming. Two of the latter, of which mention has not yet been made in detail are approaching the point of materialization, will be located in Oakland. The Pizan, to go up on Montgomery avenue, Allegheny, will be started in the near future. At least two office buildings, of which the public has not been informed will be built in the downtown section of Pittsburgh, and hotel projects are numerous, one very large one being a certainty.

A deal is on for more Wood street realty, below Fourth avenue. The brokers said to be handling the matter refused to make any statement beyond the fact that an attempt had been made to secure certain sites which as yet had not been sold.

One transaction reported yesterday was the sale by the Rev. Andrew W. Hays to George L. Hays of an improved lot 60x150 feet on Bayne avenue, Bellevue, for $5,400.

James A. Griffith reports the following sales at Fair Haven Terrace: Lot No. 26 to Joseph Artman for $300; lot No. 70 to Louis Rothleder for $250; lot No. 299 to Phillip H. Conner for $160, lot No. 76 to A. S. Phillips for $250; lots Nos. 79 and 80 to J. N. Mellott for $560; lots Nos. 77 and 78 to William H. Phillips for $500.

Foreign Bourses.

LONDON, May 30.—Preparations on the stock exchange for payments of month end requirements caused a good demand for money to-day. Discounts were easy. Business on the stock exchange did not improve, operators watching the progress of the American account. Consols were easier, though the fall was attributed largely to unloading in order to obtain money as a precautionary step, the uncertainty as to the American position being the main reason alleged, with the approach of the settlement in old and new stock a considerable bull account apparently existing. Americans opened approximately at New York parity and afterward improved. Though this was the most active section of the market, business was slow. Owing to the holiday in New York there was an indisposition to engage in fresh transactions. Grand Trunks were firm.

PARIS, May 30.—Prices on the bourse to-day opened heavily, after the opening declaration they improved. Spanish 4s recovered sharply, influenced by good purchases. The close was generally better. Rentes started weak on apprehensions of large deliveries of stock in the settlement, but recovered on intervening purchases. Rio Tintos improved considerably, finishing very firm. French rails were strong and hardening.

BERLIN, May 30.—Business started dull on the bourse to-day. Coal declined in consequence of unfavorable rumors regarding the early report of the Laura-Huester mines. Subsequently business improved under the lead of Canadian Pacific, the reported settlement of the Chinese indemnity question strengthening the market. Home funds and Chinese hardened.

THE THREE RIVERS

(Special to the Commercial Gazette.)

CINCINNATI, O., May 30.—Suit was filed in the United States court of this city late yesterday by the Monongahela River Coal and Coke Company of Pittsburgh against the Kanawha and Ohio Coal Company of this city for $1,400 for the loss of one loaded coal barge and one flat. The harbor of the local coal company is about one-quarter of a mile above the city water works and on December 16 there was a stage of 54 feet of water in the rivers. The channel of the river is near the shore where the harbor is, and the towboat Defender with tow, coming from Pittsburgh, to get beneath the Louisville & Nashville bridge safely, closed in toward the shore and a smash-up of the tow and fleet followed. The accident occurred at night. The Pittsburgh company lost one barge and one flat and the local company's fleet was slightly damaged. In the suit the Pittsburgh company says that the fleet of the Kanawha Company was in the channel of the river and therefore responsible for the damage sustained. The steamer Hudson was in the vicinity of the smash-up at the time and had a narrow escape. The towboat Fred Wilson passed through to-night on her way to Louisville with 12 boats and 7 barges; this was the only local movement in towboats. The Jim Wood and Hush Munk are due up to-morrow morning from Louisville with tows. In the tow of the former is a barge of sugar, which is consigned to a local firm. The towboats Mornet, 124 Monongahela, and Queen City, due in this morning. The steamer Pittsburgh departed to-night for Memphis with a good freight start. The steamer Keystone State departed on time for Pittsburgh. Wood was reported coupling and coaling to the steamer Wheeling, which on last Friday afternoon left Middleport with Wheeling as her destination. The steamer was constructed at Middleport by Boat Builder Capt. Ann Booth, and was complimented upon the boat, which is reputed to be a model of its kind. The machinery, which was designed with a view of creating a revolution in the machinery of steamers, broke up to yesterday proved a failure. The steamer arrived at Parkersburg, a distance of 90 miles from Middleport, and there the trouble began. The machinery of one had broken down. She was four days in making that port. At present she is at Marietta and the broken machinery is being repaired as rapidly as possible. Stage at 6 p. m., 36.2 feet. Rain during the day.

Capt. W. H. Bowen, a well-known riverman, died at his home, Dayton, Ky., Tuesday night. He was 65 years old, and leaves a widow and three grown children.

The steamers Greenwood and Lorena were due last night. The Greenwood departed this afternoon for Charleston, and the Lorena for Zanesville Saturday afternoon.

The excursion steamers yesterday carried large crowds. The Elizabeth took 400 passengers to East Liverpool in the morning, returning last night. The Francis J. Torrance carried large crowds afternoon and night.

The passengers of the steamer Dubuque, which sunk above Burlington Monday evening, arrived at St. Louis by rail. Capt. Isaac P. Lusk, agent of the Diamond Jo line, says that the boat will be raised in a few days.

All three rivers are falling, but the decline in the stage of water is expected to be slow as long as the weather remains cool. There ought to be good packet water until the middle of June, even if no rain falls during the next two weeks.

The Mississippi and Ohio Rivers Pilots' society will take steps to have electric signal lights placed on the piers of the Merchants' bridge at St. Louis for the benefit of tug pilots in the harbor and other pilots obliged to ascend the river above the bridge. According to Capt. P. S. Brown, secretary of the society, the oil lights at present used for signaling on the bridge cannot be seen by pilots in foggy weather, and are at all times indistinct from a distance.

It was reported on the wharf yesterday that the grand jury at Parkersburg, W. Va., ignored the bill pending against Sidney Cole, the man who, it is alleged, shot and killed W. T. Terry, carpenter of the Keystone State. It was alleged that Cole shot at Terry from the bank. The accident happened during the April flood. Cole claimed that he was protecting another man's property, it being feared that the wash from the Keystone State might hit the house where Cole was visiting from its foundation.

STRUCK THE COFFERDAM.

The John W. Ailes Sinks Four Coalboats and Damages a Barge at Sewickley.

The towboat John W. Ailes, owned by the river coal combination, which departed yesterday morning with a tow of coal, struck the cofferdam at Sewickley, sank one coalboat, which will prove a total loss, and tore the rest out of shape. The current carried the boat against the new government dam. The Charlie Clark landed the Ailes' tow, which was scattered about the river. The Ailes will take eight coalboats and two barges south from Bellaire.

The B. D. Wood departed, taking nine coalboats and the barge Allegheny, loaded with coal, for Memphis. The Wood should have gotten out Wednesday, did not depart until daylight yesterday. The Sam Brown and the Fallis will depart to-day with tows of coal. The Keystone State departed with tows of coal, Jutte, which will take 12 coalboats to Louisville. A. R. Budd sent the Frank Gilmore, which took six coalboats.

MINISTER WU PRAISES GRANT

Tells of the Admiration of Chinese People for America's Great Warrior.

OBEYS LI HUNG CHANG'S INSTRUCTIONS

Lays Wreath of Flowers on the Tomb at Riverside--Tablets in Hall of Fame Unveiled--Oration by Senator Chauncey M. Depew.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Although there were signs of rain throughout the early part of to-day, the memorial exercises in this city were carried out with more than the usual interest. The important events on the day's program were the military parade, which was reviewed at Madison square by Gov. Odell and Mayor VanWyck, the exercises at Grant's tomb where Wu Ting Fang made an address, and the dedication of the Hall of Fame at the New York university, at which Senator Chauncey M. Depew delivered an oration.

The parade included the Old Guard acting as an escort to Gov. Odell, several detachments of United States regulars, a number of militia organizations, a battalion of United States marines and all of the local posts of the G. A. R. In all there were about 15,000 men in line.

At Grant's tomb Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister, in accordance with instructions given by Li Hung Chang some years ago, placed an offering of flowers on the stone coffin containing the general's remains. Mr. Wu also delivered an address in which he said:

Chinese Minister's Tribute.

"Nothing shows more clearly the high estimation in which Grant was held by the world at large than the spontaneous outbursts of enthusiasm with which he was everywhere greeted when he made his famous tour around the world. Princes, potentates and the common people alike vied with one another in paying him the homage due to great rulers. His progress was like a triumphal procession.

"In no country, I dare say, did he receive a warmer welcome than in the old empire of China. The career of Grant is just such as is calculated to fire the imagination of the Chinese. Statesmen and generals do not come from an exclusive stock, is one of our favorite sayings. We Chinese have great admiration for men who have risen by their talents from humble beginnings to be acknowledged leaders of the people. Such was Grant.

"Minister Wu then alluded to the friendship between Gen. Grant and Li Hung Chang, and said:

"After Grant's death Earl Li gave instructions to the Chinese legation at Washington to bring every year, as is done this day, an offering of flowers to the general's tomb on Memorial Day, as a token of his enduring friendship."

Gen. Grant's Son Speaks.

While the exercises at Grant's tomb were in progress Gen. Fred D. Grant, accompanied by his wife, came through the throng to the platform. He was recognized and compelled by repeated calls to come to the front. He said:

"This is most unexpected. I am not a speech-maker and do not know what to say. I am overcome with emotion and can only say that I have agreed to accept the invitation of Grant post of Brooklyn and address them soon. I shall tell them all I know about the Philippines and I want to say that your boys who have been fighting there are worthy sons and equal to their fathers."

The ceremonies at the dedication of the Hall of Fame were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hollis. Senator Chauncey M. Depew then delivered the oration. He said, in part:

"Victory, or the abbey!" was the cry with which Nelson began one of his great battles. It condensed in a sentence the ambition of the ages: to die for one's country and find glory and immortality in the national pantheon. The Scandinavian viking whose dying vision saw revealed the Walhalla of his hero gods among whom he was to dwell eternally, departed under the same inspiring passion as the Iroquois chieftain singing his death song, surrounded by heaps of his slain enemies.

Honor for All Great Men.

"It is doubtful if in any period but ours the great statesman, writer or artist ranked with the soldier. It is the distinction of our time that with advancing civilization we dedicate, beside the panel devoted to the warrior, equal honor in the Hall of Fame for authors and editors, rulers and statesmen, judges and lawyers, preachers and theologians, philanthropists, educators, musicians, painters and sculptors, physicians and surgeons, missionaries and explorers. It has been reserved for the close of the nineteenth century to elevate to lasting distinction those leaders of industries whose labors have benefited mankind, the scientists, inventors, engineers, architects and men of business.

"The American who traces his ancestors to the British Isles and visits for the first time Westminster abbey, as he wanders through its aisles and chapels experiences a singular sensation of awe and pride. But he is mortified and grieved to find among the memorials of the great who have given imperishable renown to our English-speaking people, such a vast number of statues and monuments to phantom reputations of the past, who are forgotten nonentities of the present.

Desecrations Are Impossible.

"Such desecrations are made impossible here. The prohibition of the consideration of anyone until ten years after his death removes the danger from the efforts of contemporary passion or enthusiasm. The selection and number of the ladies constitute a trained and impartial tribunal. The people of the United States are the nominators and one hundred divided among college presidents and educators, professors of history and scientists, publicists, editors and authors, the chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, and the head of the highest court in each of the several commonwealths of the union, are the electors. The gentleman upon whom has devolved the first selection have found in the wide field open to their choice only 29 whom a majority thought fit to fill the panels of this hall. There may be disappointment and mortification that after 300 years of settlement in our country, and 100 of national life, the harvest should be so small. But our situation was unique and original.

Conquered a New World.

"We were not a conquering people, absorbing and adopting the civilization, arts and accumulations of a subject nation. By slow, laborious and perilous processes the primeval forests had to be cut, and the wilderness subdued for the settlement and support of the colonists. Savages and, still more inhospitable than these scattered and adventurous families seeking homes and liberty of conscience in an unknown and unexplored land across the sea. In the experiments of new forms of government and the turbulent periods of transition to nationality there was neither thought nor opportunity, nor time for art or literature or science, or those battles which decide history and the fate of nations.

"Great men and women make history, and their lives distinguish countries and centuries. Let the court meet here every decade and select for this hall of fame those whom they believe deserve most of the Republic. Let there be gathered in the museum the precious relics, statues and memorials of the elect. The ceremony will each recitation will enlist a larger interest and closer scrutiny of worth. It will make more difficult the task of the judges, and more certain the permanence of their choice. It will cultivate the study and with it the emulation of greatness.

Titles in Perpetuity.

"In the cemeteries of France graves are leased for periods of five, ten, twenty or fifty years and in perpetuity. As the terms of the lessees expire, the bones are dug up and dumped into the common receptacle to make room for newer tenants. So in time in this hall of fame winnowing will attend selection. Only the tenants who, by the judgment of posterity, hold their tablets in perpetuity will remain, and they will have fame.

"Of these 29, who will be left a thousand years hence? The rail splitter who became president of the United States, emancipated the slave, saved the union, and in a speech of ten minutes at Gettysburg set a classic in the oratory of his country which condensed the philosophy and pathos of the civil war, will be immortal as Abraham Lincoln. There is one character here which has stood the test of time and grown brighter with the years. Washington has no predecessors, contemporaries, or successors. By the common judgment of mankind he is the noblest example of all countries and all ages of human excellence.

"If in our 125 years of national existence no other man had risen to the realms of fame, our country's contribution to the marvelous nineteenth century would be complete and supreme in George Washington.

The tablets unveiled were those of Washington, Lincoln, Webster, Franklin, Jefferson, Clay, Adams, Grant, Farragut, Lee, Marshall, Kent, Story, Peabody, Cooper, Stuart, Fulton, Morse, Whitney, Audubon, Gray, Edwards, Mann, Beecher, Channing, Emerson, Hawthorne, Irving and Longfellow.

SMILED AS DEATH CAME.

Veteran Joe Dawson Heard Roll of Memorial Day Drums and Died Happy.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—Joseph Dawson, a crippled veteran, died here this morning under pathetic circumstances. While the drums beat as his old comrades hobbled past on their way to the cemetery, his life went out.

Dawson had come all the way from the Soldiers' home at Erie to take part in the Decoration day exercises. He had served faithfully through the rebellion as a member of the Eighty-fifth Pennsylvania volunteers, and bore on his body many scars of conflict. For years his home was made with his brother, Norris Dawson, on Baldwin avenue. Some time ago he was taken to the Soldiers' home, but at the end of last week he sent word that he wanted to come home to march once more with the old boys to the cemetery. His 71st birthday was approaching, and he feared it would be his last chance.

On Monday evening he arrived and on Tuesday had several conferences with fellow members of William Kurtz post, G. A. R., with which he was connected. He became very ill soon after reaching home and this morning was at death's door. He heard the rattle of drums as the old boys came up the street, smiled and died.

Comrade Dawson's comrades did not know he was dead until returning from the cemetery. Arrangements have been made for the funeral on Saturday.

BUTLER, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—James Low, aged about 70 years, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and of the Union Veteran Legion, died this morning, while he was preparing to honor the memory of his departed comrades.

DROPPED OUT OF RANKS.

Marching Veteran in New York Expires on the Route.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(Special.)—The parade to-day cost one man his life. Joseph Thiebout, an old veteran of the G. A. R., courageously started with his comrades at the upper end of Broadway this morning, although the weight of 69 years told heavily upon him. He marched as far as Forty-third street and Fifth avenue, when he suddenly fell to the ground. His comrades raised him and bore him to the sidewalk, where he died a few minutes later. Heart disease is thought to be the cause of death. He was an engineer.

AT LAFAYETTE'S TOMB.

Americans in Paris Remembered the Gallant French Officer.

PARIS, May 30.—There was the usual pilgrimage of Americans to the tomb of Lafayette, Pichus cemetery, this afternoon. The United States ambassador, Gen. Horace Porter, Consul Gen. Gowdy and other officials were present. Speeches were delivered by Gen. Porter, Lafayette's great grandson; and Dr. Bartlett of Indianapolis.

Magnificent wreaths from Lafayette post, the Sons of the American Revolution and the Colonial Dames were deposited on the tomb.

Blue and Gray Mingled.

CUMBERLAND, MD., May 30.—(Special.)—There was a mingling of the blue and the gray at the cemetery to-day. Veterans of both sides who fought so hard against each other 35 years ago today marched side by side and decorated the graves of fallen comrades. The old boys in blue helped plant flowers on the graves of gray, then the old confederates came over and helped decorate graves of the union soldiers.

Pittsburgh Man Spoke.

GETTYSBURG, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—Representative Henry Hall of Pittsburgh delivered the oration at to-day's services in memory of the dead soldiers.

WESTERN COKE OVENS.

New Steel Combination Credited With Purpose to Erect a Huge Plant Near Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 30.—(Special.)—A prominent attorney and ex-official of Lake county, Ind., who has been retained as local attorney by the United States Steel Corporation, has just given the first insight into the connection between the new combination and the present negotiations for the purchase of the bulk of the Indiana bituminous coal mines. According to this attorney, who has been acting as agent, the purpose of the company is to erect at Edgemoor the most extensive coke oven plant in the country, equaling those of the Connellsville region. The chief object for this is to enable the company to supply coke to its steel mills at South Chicago, Joliet and Waukegon without being compelled to pay the long railroad haul from Pennsylvania.

Edgemoor is a small village on the shores of Lake Michigan, and is the terminus of the Chicago, Lake Shore & Eastern railroad, which is owned by the steel company. This railroad was built only to haul coke and ore to the mills at South Chicago and Joliet and the finished product to the various roads entering Chicago.

It is designed by the purchase of the Indiana mines not only to save the railroad freight bills from Pennsylvania, but to procure coal at the minimum cost. Already houses are being erected at Edgemoor for the accommodation of workmen, while a large three-story building has just been finished for office purposes.

FAVORS LONGENECKER.

Judge Reppert Gives Decision on the Judgeship Muddle.

SOMERSET, PA., May 30.—(Special.)—Judge Reppert's opinion in the Longenecker-Barron mandamus proceeding was received this evening by M. D. Reel, clerk of the courts. It holds that Judge Longenecker, having complied with all the rules of the Republican party in Somerset county, is entitled to his candidacy for president judge announced under the rules, and orders that a writ of peremptory mandamus issues forthwith, and that the chairman pay the costs of the proceedings. Sheriff Saylor served the writ on Chairman Barron shortly after it was received.

The judicial apportionment bill making Somerset county the Sixteenth district legislates Judge Longenecker into the county, and he will contest with Francis J. Kooser for the nomination.

GRAVES STREWN WITH FLOWERS

Clear Skies Smiled on Crowds That Thronged the Cemeteries.

VARIED PROGRAMS OF ORATORY AND MUSIC

Special Services at Grave of Judge Slagle and at Hampton Monument--Amusing Contest Between Military Band and Bagpipes.

After a week of leaden skies and rainy weather the sun rose on Memorial Day morning and shed its rays over the green turf under which sleep the heroes of many battles. At an early hour the long, thin line of blue began to form and the sorrowful march to the cemeteries was taken up. It was an ideal day. Cooling breezes gave life and action to the marchers.

One of the diverting incidents of the day occurred when a detachment of the Eighteenth regiment, escorting posts of the Grand Army, marched down Fifth avenue, band playing and flags flying. As they crossed Smithfield street there was a gap in the line and the Scotch bagpipe band, approaching on Smithfield street, fell in behind the national guardsmen, their pipes screeching "The Campbells Are Comin'."

The soldiers danced rag-time for a moment in an endeavor to strike an average between the dirge notes from the front and the tripping measures from the rear. The lairds won out, however, and the line went down the avenue at nearly "double quick" pace, while the spectators cheered.

There were three parades—one in Pittsburgh, one in Allegheny and one on the South Side. In Pittsburgh the Grand Army was escorted by the Eighteenth infantry. In Allegheny the Sixth Ward School Girls' Military company formed the escort. On the South Side the escort was formed by different societies outside of the Grand Army. When the head of the Pittsburgh column reached the Allegheny arsenal three guns in battery started the national salute. Twenty-one guns were fired.

The Rev. R. S. Holmes Was Orator.

At the cemetery the scene was impressive. After the reading of orders by J. P. Sankey of Post 480, the choir sang, "Cover Their Graves," which was followed by the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address by Comrade Edward Fisher, and prayer by the Rev. R. E. Darling. The commander's address was then made by H. C. Chaney, of Post 480, and prayer offered by the Rev. W. S. Hanks. After the oration, which was made by the Rev. R. S. Holmes instead of Judge F. H. Collier, the formal placing of flowers followed and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. M. B. Riddle.

Duquesne Post No. 259, G. A. R., held services at the grave of the late Judge Jacob F. Slagle. The Rev. Dr. M. B. Riddle of the Western Theological seminary, chaplain of the post, made a eulogistic address on the dead jurist, who was his lifelong personal friend.

Special services also were held by Col. James H. Childs Post No. 238, at the grave of the soldier in whose honor the post is named. The oration was delivered by Attorney S. A. Will, and the benediction pronounced by the Rev. C. L. Thurgood.

Services at Other Points.

At the close of the exercises the line of march was again taken up to St. Mary's cemetery, where an almost similar program was carried out. At this cemetery Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by F. J. Totten of Post 259, and prayer delivered by the Rev. F. L. Tobin. The oration was made by the Rev. J. Regis Canevin.

Special services were held at the Arsenal monument by James A. Garfield Post, Circle No. 15, Ladies of the G. A. R., assisted by Col. Childs post. The monument was erected to the memory of the girls killed in the explosion at the arsenal, on September 17, 1862. The president's address was delivered by Mrs. M. E. Taylor and the oration by the Rev. C. L. Thurgood.

The exercises at Homewood cemetery were conducted by Major W. G. Lowry Post No. 548, of Wilkinsburg. The Rev. J. A. Burnett made the oration.

Over on the South Side.

The South Side parade moved over the principal streets on that side of the river. At the head of the Knoxville incline the column was joined by Lieut. E. R. Geary post No. 236, G. A. R., Maj. E. A. Montooth camp No. 104, Sons of Veterans, and Allen school cadets. The line of march was then taken up to the South Side cemetery. After the reading of orders by Adjt. Thomas G. Jones prayer by the Rev. S. A. Hunter and the placing of flowers the oration was delivered by Attorney James Francis Burke. At the close of the exercises Lieut. E. R. Geary circle No. 7 and Gen. Thomas circle No. 24, Ladies of the G. A. R., held a special service at the mound of the unknown dead.

In Allegheny Cemeteries.

In Allegheny, at Uniondale cemetery, the exercises were under the auspices of posts 88, 128, and 162, G. A. R., and camps 33 and 98, Sons of Veterans. An interesting feature of the parade was the escort column, which consisted of the Sixth ward school girls' military company. The young women presented a handsome appearance and their evolutions as they moved along the line of march elicited much applause.

The Hampton Battery association, Battery B and the service men of the Spanish war conducted exercises at the Hampton monument in East park, Allegheny. The Rev. R. J. Young delivered the address.

At the Troy Hill cemetery a section of the Allegheny posts conducted the exercises. The orator of the day was Attorney William A. Blakeley.

Round About Pittsburgh.

At McKeesport Sam Black Post, No. 59, conducted the exercises. There was a most imposing parade, H. T. McKelvey acting as chief marshal. At Versailles cemetery Chaplain T. K. Scott opened with prayer and the oration was delivered by the Rev. A. H. Smith.

The Rev. Titus Lowe, at Braddock cemetery, made "Lincoln and His Life-Work" the topic of his oration. At the Monongahela cemetery, also in Braddock, the Rev. William J. Bucher spoke on "The Great Civil Strife and the Spanish-American War." Maj. A. M. Harper post was in charge.

At Turtle Creek the addresses were delivered by the Revs. E. A. Husted, R. J. Bamber and W. S. Fleming.

The Washington infantry, under command of Capt. W. R. Gelffuss, acted as escort of the veterans at Sewickley. Abe Patterson Post, No. 88, and Alexander Hays Post, No. 7, had charge of the exercises. Past Commander Daniel Ashworth delivered the oration. There was a special service at the grave of Col. John I. Nevin, the Rev. John A. Jayne being the speaker.

German veterans of the Franco-Prussian war were the escort of honor at Carnegie. The services were under the auspices of Thomas Espy Post, No. 153, and James A. Garfield Post, No. 215. The Rev. L. R. Jones was the orator.

PARKS FAIRLY FILLED.

Despite the Cool Weather, Thousands Turned Out to Pleasure Resorts in and About City.

Pittsburghers had a holiday yesterday, but where and how to spend it was a question in many minds. There were no special attractions in the city. Buffalo Bill's show had come and gone. The Pittsburgh baseball team played away from home. There were no special features at the city parks and people also were disinclined to visit them on account of the uncertain predictions of the weather man. A few picnic parties were out, but they were few indeed, and there was not the pleasure usually experienced.

It was possibly the coldest Decoration day for many years. The visitors at Highland park wore heavy winter wraps and top overcoats, and straw hats were conspicuous by their absence. The visitors began arriving at noon and from then until five the park was fairly crowded.

The largest crowd of the day was at Schenley park. There were more driving parties than at any time this year, and camera fiends were out in full force. A noticeable feature was the number of automobiles spinning along the drives. Over 75 machines were seen at Schenley yesterday afternoon. There was a great disappointment among bicycle enthusiasts on account of the races being called off. The track was too wet and soggy.

The Phipps conservatory and the Carnegie library were open all day, and the museum and art galleries also caught a large percentage of visitors.

Calhoun park, on the Second avenue line, was thronged, the number of people passing through the gates being estimated at 15,000. The Duquesne Grays band gave concerts and Hammond's Pickaninny band moved about playing rag-time airs, and the dancing pavilion was packed at all times.

At Oakwood park, on the West End line, 12,000 was the estimate of the number in attendance. Nirelli's Fourteenth Regiment band gave open air concerts and over near the baseball ground Prof. Hibbard, the "king of the clouds," made two balloon ascensions.

MONUMENT UNVEILED.

Granite Memorial to Gen. Alexander Hays is Dedicated With Impressive Ceremonies.

The Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers' Regimental association unveiled a handsome granite monument in Allegheny cemetery yesterday morning to the memory of Gen. Alexander Hays.

The ceremonies opened with a dirge by the Second Brigade band, followed by prayer. Then a quartet, composed of Miss Henriette Keil, Helen M. Keil, W. J. Catoe and B. Keil, Jr., sang Nevin's "Roses Strew Roses." The monument was unveiled by Mrs. Martha Hays Black, after which Comrade Thomas H. Martin of Company F made an address, in which he gave a brief history of the regiment and spoke of Gen. Hays as colonel and general.

Memorial services were held at the grave by Gen. Alexander Hays post No. 3. They were opened by the Second Brigade band playing "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground." This was followed by an address by W. J. Hamilton and a prayer by Comrade R. E. Stewart.

After the formal placing of flowers Post Commander Daniel Ashworth made an address on Gen. Hays on behalf of the post. Following this were addresses by Comrades Kaufmann, William Few and John R. Remley. Company F, Third regiment, Boys' brigade, fired the salute to the dead. After benediction the post, escort and band retired to Keen's auditorium at the corner of Forty-fourth and Butler streets, where they were served with a very nice lunch by the Ellsworth circle No. 42, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic.

BIG COCKFIGHT ENDS IN A STORMY SCENE

Riot Among Spectators Followed the Season's Final Contest.

There were others than game birds in the fighting Wednesday night, in the last cock fight of the season given by Pittsburgh sports in a cockpit near Bauerstown, on the Evergreen road. After the roosters got through the spectators mixed up in a little scrimmage of their own, and before peace was restored bruised noses and discolored eyes were numerous.

From the cockfighter's standpoint the windup of the season was auspicious. Ten battles were fought, exclusive of the bout between the sports themselves. The contest was between Lawrenceville and Homestead birds. The Homestead contingent won seven of the ten points, and claim a glorious victory.

Wednesday night had been scheduled as the banner event of the season, and the sports wore their loudest clothes and wagered their heaviest stakes. The birds were in excellent trim. Roosters that boast of being veterans of many a bloody conflict were there, and the 400 spectators tried to walk with a demeanor as stately as that of the feathered principals.

When the peaceable, Quakerfied chanticleers in farm yard hen roosts were crowing the hour of midnight the fighters betook themselves to the cockpits, and the bouts were pulled off in good style until 4 o'clock in the morning, when the last battle was ordered. The birds did their best, and then a few of their backers took a hand. The friends of the aforesaid backers followed up, and this set the example for every sport in the house. The fighting was soon proceeding so furiously that the oldtime professional birds hid their heads under their wings in humiliation.

A whole lot of money changed hands, and yesterday the winners who had not been obliged to spend a goodly amount of their "velvet" for iodine and court-plaster, were congratulating themselves over their luck.

BAPTISM RECORD MAILED.

It Will Be Used in Behalf of Aide Gertrude Baughman in Davis Will Contest.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 30.—(Special.)—The Rev. John D. Boland, rector of St. Vincent's Catholic church, received a special delivery letter Monday from Charles H. Davis, Hotel Henry, Pittsburgh, asking him to send a certified copy of the record of the baptism of Aide Gertrude Baughman. She was a niece of Charles A. Davis, the actor, who died about a year ago. In his letter Mr. Davis said she was a daughter of Samuel and Emma Baughman, and was born in Baltimore, December 28, 1871. The will is being contested, and the money involved is said to be about $200,000.

One of the old church books shows a record that Gertrude Aide Baughman, daughter of Samuel Baughman and Emma Baughman, was baptized January 21, 1872, by the Rev. Henry Myers. The record of birth simply shows "28, 1871," the month being omitted. The maiden name of her mother was Emma Davis. Father Boland made a certified copy of the record and sent it to Mr. Davis, who desires to use it in court.

KEEPING OLD COMPACT.

Pittsburgh Minister Reaches Cleveland to Preach Sermon Over Friend's Body.

CLEVELAND, O., May 30.—(Special.)—Rev. F. Mueller, a German Evangelical minister of 504 Kirkpatrick street, Pittsburgh, reached here to preach a sermon over the remains of his old friend, Rev. Frederick von Schluembach, who died yesterday morning.

Years ago the two ministers agreed that when one should die the other should go and preach his funeral sermon. Among the effects of the dead minister was found a paper directing that Rev. Mueller be found and reminded of the agreement. Rev. Mueller was soon located in Pittsburgh, and arrived here to-night. Von Schluembach was a German baron.

NAPHTHA LAUNCH BLOWS UP.

Lighting of a Cigar Nearly Cost a Couple Their Lives.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. A. Rudyman of Great Neck, L. I., had a narrow escape from both burning and drowning this morning by the explosion of a naphtha can on a recently constructed launch. Mr. Rudyman took a match from his pocket to light a cigar. There was a terrific explosion and both Mr. and Mrs. Rudyman were almost thrown into the water.

Mr. Rudyman tried to quench the flames, but without avail. Both jumped into the water. Although Mr. Rudyman is a strong swimmer, he had all he could do to keep up his wife. Both were rescued by a boat from shore. It is thought that a quantity of the naphtha had escaped from the tank and laid a train.

WANT TO BREAK A SOLID SOUTH

Feeling in Washington That Sectionalism Should Now Be Abolished.

EFFECT OF SOUTH CAROLINA CONTEST

Republican Leaders at the Capital Feel Friendly to Senator McLaurin—Administration Will Not Take Sides in the Fight.

BY CHARLES W. METZGAR,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—The administration leaders are taking the keenest interest in the Tillman-McLaurin fight in South Carolina. It is practically an open secret that the Republican leaders in Washington would be delighted to have Mr. McLaurin win, but it is not likely that the president or any of his official representatives will permit themselves to get mixed up in the contest. The full significance of the struggle that is being waged between Tillman and McLaurin is probably not realized by the casual observer. Whether John L. McLaurin is defeated or not is of little moment in the general equation of events. If he should be successful—which the best judges here regard as extremely doubtful—it will only hasten what conservative observers believe to be the inevitable—that is to say, a complete and radical overturning of the political traditions that have dominated the southern states ever since the dark days of reconstruction and carpet-bag rule.

Three states that have hitherto been classed as belonging to the solid south—Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia—are viewed as pretty safely anchored in the Republican column, while Kentucky, Missouri and perhaps Tennessee are considered debatable ground. But the fact remains that no former confederate state has cast its electoral votes for the nominees of the Republican party since they were restored to the full rights of suffrage. The votes of South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana were counted for Rutherford B. Hayes, in 1876, but that was only after a bitter partisan fight, which was finally settled by a compromise by which the Democrats lost by one vote in the electoral commission. There has been no break in the political bulwark of the old confederate states for the last quarter of a century.

That the political solidity of the south has worked to its disadvantage, commercially and otherwise, is perfectly obvious to the dullest mind. Development has been retarded. The richest and most fertile section of the country, from every natural point of view, has practically stood still, while other sections, like the great northwest, with not one-tenth of the natural advantages of the south, have gone ahead.

Many Democrats of the south have deplored the conditions which have made this section solidly antagonistic to the sister states of the north and west. So long as the race question remains prominent, they felt themselves helpless to secure a change. But the race issue now being practically eliminated the intelligent people of the south are beginning to hope for a new era and a recasting of political ties.

KNOX SEEKING A RESIDENCE.

Will Probably Buy a Fine Mansion at National Capital.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—(Special.)—Attorney General Knox is seeking residence property in Washington. During the past few days he has looked at several fine homes in the northwest section of the city.

The prices of the properties Mr. Knox has under consideration range from $75,000 to $200,000, and if he decides to buy, it is announced, he desires to secure a handsome property in the neighborhood of Dupont circle, or in some equally desirable locality.

Fairbanks Will Seek Re-Election.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30.—(Special.)—Senator Fairbanks, who is in Washington on departmental business, was fairly deluged with inquiries to-day touching his rumored presidential candidacy. To all of these he answered that the only ambition he has at this time, is to be returned to the United States senate in 1903.

STOLE GRAVESTONE NAMES.

Alleged Census Padders of Maryland on Trial—Charged With a Political Motive.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 30.—(Special.)—Joseph H. Ching, a lawyer and member of the Republican state central committee, and Census Enumerators Stephen A. Abell, Daniel J. Bowles and Philip T. Graves, all of St. Marys county, Md., are on trial in the federal district court on charges of conspiracy and making fraudulent census returns. Charles B. Guyther, another enumerator, has pleaded guilty and testified against Ching.

Any county in Maryland with less than 18,000 population sends two delegates to the lower house of the legislature, and a county with more than 18,000 sends three. After the census had been taken Ching learned that the county, which is Republican and in Congressman Mudd's district, would have but 17,999. He went to Washington and induced the supervisor of the district to send additional schedules to the four enumerators. Acting under his orders, it has been testified, the enumerators filled up the schedules with names of people who had been dead or removed from the county for from one to ten years, and with guests at hotels, making the needed 1,000.

Feeling Poorly?

That's often the case this time of year. Hardly sick enough to have a doctor, yet miserable all the time.

Of course, if you are right hard sick, you should call your physician at once. Even now that you are only half sick, why not ask him about your taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla this spring?

He knows it's the strongest, safest, purest, and best Sarsaparilla you can buy, and he will probably tell you that for general debility and nerve exhaustion it is the best thing you can take.
